New library annex

THE VACANT Crocker Bank building, located at the corner of Mission and Sixth, will be the site for the proposed Harrison Memorial Library Annex if Wells Fargo Bank accepts the city's offer of $1.75 million, which it has already agreed verbally it would do. The Carmel City Council unanimously approved the action at Tuesday's meeting, which essentially puts an end to the annex site being located across from the library at Sixth and Lincoln, as has been proposed in the past. Council OKs deal for Crocker Bank building

By DAVID LELAND

ANOTHER HURDLE was vaulted this week toward the proposed Harrison Memorial Library Annex as the Carmel City Council unanimously accepted a purchase price of $1.75 million for the vacant Crocker Bank building from Wells Fargo Bank.

Finalizing the deal appears to be a formality, according to Doug Schmitz, city administrator, because Mayor Clint Eastwood, representing the city, already has a handshake agreement with the bank.

As terms of the loan were read, which would require a $750,000 down payment — $400,000 to be paid by the city and $350,000 to be paid by the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees — the audience favored the offer.

"It's a swell deal, you ought to take it," yelled resident Lindsey Hannah from his seat in the back of the Carmel Woman's Club.

The offer includes a five-year lease purchase plan with monthly payments at 7.5 percent interest.

The council wasted little time in unanimously approving the notification of the Wells Fargo Bank.

After the vote, Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo urged the crowd to congratulate Eastwood on his negotiations with the bank, which began last December when the city offered $1.8 million for the vacant bank and Wells Fargo countered with a $2.3-million offer.

"It's somewhat of a disappointment seeing as I was trying to get a 100 percent gift," joked Eastwood amid applause.

But for the man who spearheaded the move to have the annex housed in the Crocker Bank building instead of the proposed Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street site, which was approved last August by the city council, it was a time to celebrate.

"The library matter used to be a wrestling match and it's now a waltz," said former councilman Tom May.

"It's 20 years of hassling to end settlement of library for more space," he continued. "This council and this (library) board deserve an unusual amount of credit for doing something seldom seen in politics.

"That is to reopen a settlement and move across to something better."

According to Schmitz, there would be a no pre-payment penalty clause included in the lease and the deal would not be finalized until an engineer was able to do a complete inspection of the building.

• •

IT APPEARS that residents and library officials favoring the annex to be built across from the library will have to get used to the idea of travelling the three blocks to the new annex site.

And, while there still are questions to be answered, such as: what city projects will be put on hold with the city forking out $400,000 initially and making monthly payments until 1991? the councilmembers were optimistic.

Schmitz revealed at Tuesday's meeting the terms of the lease, which would have to be met monthly after the down payment.

These were for a 1988 payment of $250,000 of which $75,000 will be interest; for 1989 a $250,000 payment of which $56,250 will be interest; for 1990 a $250,000 of which $37,500 will be interest; and in 1991 a payment of $250,000 of which $18,750 will be interest.

The library board, which has slightly more than $1 million at its disposal, will provide help for the initial down payment and then will pay $700,000 for renovation of the bank building and $75,000 for changes once the building is occupied, Schmitz said.

Wisdom to change

Dear Editor:

I don't like the Pine Cone's treatment of the recent "General Plan" proceedings. It was couched in the same ambiguous language as the meeting itself. This seems to be the "work" of the same technocrats who have justified the proliferation of hotels in our state parks and the recent desecration of Spanish Bay. Mission Trail Park suffers the same fate.

The present city council in Carmel-by-the-Sea is doing nothing to halt this trend, in fact, they and their appointees gave tacit approval to Spanish Bay and have deemed that the Flanders property should be subdivided. Hatton Canyon and the "Great Dam" then become inevitable — so goes their propaganda.

The status quo stands to benefit because of the recent Casino-LA mentality pervading the peninsula. I've never seen any of these people walking in our most treasured open spaces which accounts for a conspicuous lack of legislation to secure them as greenbelts.

If Carmel is ever to vaguely resemble the "artist community," it purports to be, it must act boldly and decisively in alleviating the roots of its ills. A tourist-merchant empire has fundamentally usurped the radiant peace that the stewards of this region originally beheld. They were the Indians and they knew the blessing of living with the cycles in nature, thereby minimizing their impact on the land. We now witness a contrary age: people are expendable commodities on the open market and their value is proportionate to their pocketbook.

We should put a gate around Carmel-by-the-Sea and charge tourists and Pebble Beach residents to enter. This would fatten the coffers for the city so we could buy the Flanders estate and Mission Ranch for open space.

If it is true that 80 percent of city revenues come from tourism, then the Carmel charter is obsolete. The Book of Revelations warns of the merchants that have grown fat with profit. Without the wisdom to change, we shall irretrievably suffer the fate of this unbridled greed.

Transporting fish

Dear Editor:

This letter is the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's response to Mr. Bruce Crane's letter published in the March 12 Pine Cone. Mr. Crane asserted that a fish ladder would be a better solution than a trap/truck method to pass upstream migrating steelhead over the proposed New San Clemente Dam.

In late 1983, the California Department of Fish and Game (CDFG) requested that the district assess five alternative methods to pass fish over the dam. They included a lock system, a fish elevator, a fish ladder, a trap/truck operation, and a combination ladder and trap/truck. Fishery experts and engineers experienced in designing fish passage facilities analyzed each alternative. They assessed impacts on fish health and migration, mechanical feasibility and reliability, and cost.

These experts concluded that "a well-designed trapping and trucking operation is the best way of moving adult steelhead upstream around the New San Clemente Dam." They also found "no significant biological advantage to alternatives that require construction of a long fish ladder and cost nearly four times as much." It should be noted that the U..S. Fish and Wildlife Service has been successfully trapping and transporting salmon at Keswick Dam below Shasta Reservoir since 1943, and has been doing the same for both salmon and steelhead at Red Bluff Diversion Dam since 1966. Based on these findings, the CDFG approved the trap/truck concept for upstream migrants at New San Clemente Dam.

The proposed trap/truck operation at New San Clemente Dam would not entail tranquilizers. Care would be taken to move fish frequently and at low densities to minimize stress. The two-mile truck ride would last one-half hour. In contrast, fish would need at least one day to traverse the nearly mile-long ladder, if built, which could be detrimental to late season spawners.

Mr. Crane is correct that a trap/truck operation requires maintenance, but so does a fish ladder. In fact, the projected annual operating costs for a ladder total $96,000 compared to $53,000 for the trap/truck option.

We agree with Mr. Crane's comment, "We have a chance to do something great" with the proposed dam — provide water for people and preserve an environmental resource. We are working hard to achieve those goals, and appreciate the community's support.

Corrections needed

Dear Editor:

In a letter to the editor in the Pine Cone March 19, Stanley Worth made misstatements that should be corrected.

1. He believes that the Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) relating to the Hatton Canyon Freeway shows that no land would be taken from adjoining properties if Highway 1 is widened to three, four or six lanes. In the EIS he could read page iii: "Alternative 3...would require 0.25 acres of additional right of way." "Alternative 4...would require .36 acres of additional right of way." "Alternative 6...would require 1.34 acres of additional right of way."

2. He believes that Highway 1 was planned as the freeway "from the very beginning." The state and the Monterey County Board of Supervisors signed a freeway agreement on May 6, 1957 to establish the route in Hatton Canyon, and the state proceeded forthwith to purchase the right of way in Hatton Canyon. A beginning 30 years ago is mighty early.

3. Finally, he believes that it is a recent act by Caltrans to use federal funds, and that source of funding was not mentioned at the presentation of the EIS last year. For goodness sake, the first page of the EIS has these words: "Draft Environmental Impact Statement U.S. Department of Transportation, Federal Highway Administration, and The State of California Department of Transportation." The use of federal funds make the EIS a requirement.

Frankly, I too believe that the funds should come from our county's share of state gasoline tax monies, for the simple reason that money from Washington is always expensive for the very reason that costly, irrelevant, paperwork is mandated. Alas, unfortunately, I've never been able to convince county and state road folks that they should move Hatton Canyon out of the federal funds list!

But, let us keep the facts straight.

Progress?

Dear Editor:

The following is from The Carmel Cymbal and Masten's Gazette dated Jan. 1942.

Carmel Growth
Brings More
Law Trouble

"Police Cheif Roy Fraties modestly prefers not to put his finger on any specific cause for the increase in accidents, citations, and arrests in Carmel during the past year, but he does suggest that perhaps the growth in population has had something to do with it.

Accidents investigated jumped from 85 to 135.

Citations were up from 397 to 955.

Arrests (taken to jail) advanced from 144 to 189.

These are 1940 and 1941 figures for 12-month periods.

June, July, and August of the past year were especially heavy months for police duty, indicating that perhaps growth in the resident population represented but one side of the matter.

The more more things change — the more they stay the same.

Unlawful rentals

Dear Editor:

I wonder how many people are having the problems we are in our neighborhood with illegal short-term rentals. The city ordinance states that it's a misdemeanor to rent a residence for less than 30 days, whether it be the owner, tenant or real estate broker. In our situation I believe it to be the real estate agent who persists.

Across the street is a second home that is constantly being rented for short periods. The house has room for four couples and is sometimes full. One winter a group came twice that had a regular car, a four-wheel drive and a house trailer over 30 feet. The latter two left before dawn, noisily, just the way they do from motels on the highway, returned the same way, late.

During events like the Monterey Jazz Festival they arrive at different times the first night and thereafter all together as a noisy happy gang. When there's a golf tournament you get the excited camaraderie early on. Sometimes they come in airport vans that have a very special sliding door slam. Sometimes they bring a dog that gets lonesome being left behind and howls.

There is no one in the house the way there is in a legitimate licensed inn — to be in charge to control and monitor situations.

I've complained for three years to no avail. In late Septembmer I wrote the city and the council describing our woes. The city administrator wrote and stated that he would bring the matter up in the November meeting. Our new council woman called to assure me of her concern — no action.

In December there were three rentals — the worst yet. In January I went to the city hall and spoke to two officials — was again assured of concern. In February there was a weekly plus a weekend rental. I was told by the planning department that a report had been made but there was no mention of it in the last Tuesday's agenda.

So...the only way left is the embarrassing way, which is to notify the renters, who are probably innocent and unaware that they are committing a nuisance by renting for less than 30 days.

I got my copy of the ordinance from the city hall: 17.08.020 "Transient use of dwelling units prohibited in all zoning districts." It can be posted, delivered, put on placards.

I hope if there are abuses the residents complain, loud and clear and persistently.

Animal suffering

Dear Editor:

It is a little distressing, not to say ironic, to see a charitable enterprise like Hospice exploiting the suffering of helpless animals to raise money for their charitable-to-humans activities. I refer to the auctioning of a mink coat, as pictured in your issue of the 19th of March.

Surely everyone who can read, and has an imagination, knows about the terrible suffering of animals that goes into every fur coat.

Whether it is trapping, or "ranching" of our animal friends, we are talking about an unspeakably cruel treatment of these, our fellow creatures.

Mink, like all weasels, are the very essence of movement. They are so fast moving they can hardly be photographed by the fastest of lenses. To imprison them in tiny cages, and then to end their miserable lives with a needle, or a smashing blow to the head is, to civilized persons, simply unacceptable.

I hope Hospice can find a more appropriate way to raise funds than to auction off a mink coat.

Is bigger better?

Dear Editor:

It seems that it is only human nature to want to change and improve things. Usually in the case of public facilities the cry is to make them bigger and more modern. However in the case of the Presbyterian Church here in Carmel, bigger in my opinion, will not be better.

The proposed improvements will not only destroy an architecturally beautiful and unique village church building, but will also adversely affect the church's neighbors by increasing traffic, parking and general congestion in the immediate vicinity of the church.

In a more general sense than ever — constant pressure to enlarge facilities here in Carmel works insidiously to destroy the very soul of the village.

It is unfortunate that Carmel can not accommodate all who would come. In our case geography prohibits continual growth.

Silver says Carmel Valley Master Plan legal

By DAVID LELAND

AN ALMOST 8-year-old injunction limiting development in Carmel Valley has been lifted by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver. Now, it's up to the county staff to figure out how to carry out the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The master plan twice before had come before Silver and both times he had sent it back to the county board of supervisors for further review.

But this Tuesday he gave the document his OK.

"The court finds that the environmental impact report and Carmel Valley Master Plan meet legal requirements," Silver wrote in his seven-page brief.

In his decision the judge also excluded the Odello property from the plan, saying it was a "legislative" not a "court" matter and up to the supervisors to decide the Odello's fate, not his. The Odellos propose to build a 162-unit subdivision on their land off Highway 1 south of Carmel.

When contacted, Bruna Odello said she was not jubilant, but instead was sad that the process had taken 25 years to come this far.

In March, the master plan had been challenged by attorneys Alexander Henson and Richard Rosenthal, who claimed, among other faults, that the plan's goals could not be carried out economically.

Rosenthal and Henson specifically pointed to the Hatton Canyon Freeway project, the four-laning of Carmel Valley Road, the sewering of Carmel Valley and the proposed New San Clemente Dam as examples of unfeasible projects.

The judge, however, disagreed.

"It is not true, as asserted by the petitioner at the hearing, that these mitigation measures are similar to transporting people to the moon in a rocket," he wrote. "Not one of these measures is inherently infeasible.

"In fact, the dam has been under consideration for some time, Hatton Canyon freeway is on the approved list of projects to be completed by the state and four-laning of parts of Carmel Valley Road are already in the five-year county works project."

Dissatisfied parties have 30 days in which to file an appeal.

At press time Rosenthal said he had not had time to review the brief and did not know if he would appeal the decision.

Meanwhile, 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman said she was elated that the injunction had been lifted and that the county could move ahead with the plan.

"After seven years of moratorium we all look forward to life returning to normal," she said.

Strasser Kauffman said she has four immediate tasks ahead of her — all will involve public hearings.

•

THE FIRST step is to form a subdivision allocation committee, to be composed of Carmel Valley residents, she said.

This committee will review each building permit and decide, with the help of a complicated 10-point rating system, which will be permitted.

A maximum of 49 units are permitted annually under the plan.

Strasser Kauffman said she will advertise for the committee and will make recommendations to the board of supervisors after she interviews the applicants.

Next, she said, the board needs to look for a "clearer delineation" of the trigger mechanisms contained in the plan.

Thus far the plan is unclear how problems of water, air, noise and other types of pollution will be monitored and at what level of toxic activity the county will be notified.

Strasser Kauffman said she will also form a Carmel Trails plan and a Carmel Village Master Plan committee, which will deal exclusively with that area.

Strasser Kauffman gave accolades to all those who have struggled through different stages of the plan.

"The credit goes to the county planning staff and to the public for working on the different policies to safeguard our future in this special place," she said.

Another major aspect of the plan which needs to be decided is what type of zoning the valley will have, according to J.R. Ramos, a county counsel representing the board with its plan.

Ramos said he thinks the valley will use Rural Allocation Zoning, which is related to a scenic construction zone.

He added that after eight years of working on the plan, he is glad the project will move to a different stage.

"I think it's wonderful that we can get to cellent plan," he said.

•

JUDGE SILVER, in his decision, also addressed other objections by Rosenthal and Henson.

One of the complaints was that there was "insufficient analysis" of the potential growth-inducing impacts of the mitigation measures.

The judge points to the county's policy within the plan that says "Infrastructure improvements such as roads...shall be sized to serve only the desired level of growth as indicated by the overall quota and annual allocation.

"Further, even if more water might be available if the dam is built this would not permit greater development."

Another objection raised by the petitioner was the lack of standards associated with road and traffic conditions, but Silver disagreed.

"Any new project would require a project specific traffic study and a finding of whether the project would impact on traffic conditions," he wrote.

City council requires full EIR on Bennett property

By DAVID LELAND

AFTER ALMOST a year of haggling with city staff, attorney George Brehmer has been ordered by the Carmel City Council to prepare an environmental impact report for the Louise Bennett property.

Brehmer had attempted to persuade the council both Tuesday and at its last meeting to pursue one of two options for the 11-lot project located between Dolores and San Carlos streets.

He suggested the council either divide the parcel into upper and lower lots, with the upper land receiving a negative declaration so building could begin with the lower needing an EIR. Or, conduct a "focused EIR" for the entire project.

A focused EIR would have also allowed building to begin on all but three of the lots, which are on the downhill slope of the proposed development.

But the council, acting on the advice of City Atty. Don Freeman and city staff, rejected both of Brehmer's ideas and unanimously moved to require a complete EIR for the entire project.

The next move for the planning department will be to find an acceptable consultant to do the job, said Diane White, planning director. She said the entire process will take between four and six months and will be paid for by the developers.

Both Clayton Neill, city engineer, and residents had fought for the EIR because of the possible flood runoff and drainage problems during winter storms.

Those opposing the plan were vocal in their fears throughout Brehmer's journey from the planning commission to the city council, which began last July.

"Mr. Brehmer represents the interests of those who own the property," said J .S. Holiday, a Carmel resident. "It seems to me it's your (council) responsibility to see we do have an EIR."

But councilmembers were cautious and attempted to find a way to divide the parcel in two, but Freeman said this would not be in line with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), which states that if there is any disagreement on environmental concerns by experts, a complete EIR shall be required.

"If the experts disagree, we're pretty much obliged," said Mayor Clint Eastwood. "It's a rock and a hard place between Bennett concerns and public concerns."

Both Neill and engineer Carl Hooper, representing Bennett property owners, had disagreed on whether an EIR was required.

At least one councilmember, however, wanted full disclosure by the developers.

"I wonder what dark hallway will be found when we have one (EIR) done," said Councilman Bob Fischer.

Agreeing was Councilman Jim Wright.

"Based on comments from the public and staff, I feel an EIR would be prudent for this coucil to require," he said.

Perhaps the public sentiment was best summed up by longtime Carmel resident Francis "Skip" Lloyd.

"If you've got an unsolved problem you don't leave it until after you've approved the plan," he said.

Lloyd also said the delays have cost Brehmer as well as the concerned residents.

"It (EIR) could have been well on its way by now," he said.

LONG A point of angst for Mayor Clint Eastwood and the Carmel City Council, the Bennett property will have to produce an EIR before any development begins. Before March's council meeting councilmembers toured the property for a closer look. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Bank of Carmel shareholders settlement offer

NATIONAL BANK of Carmel shareholders may find a long-awaited letter in their mailbox this week.

The letter will outline an offer and request that the shareholder indicate whether he or she wishes to participate in a settlement.

The amount each shareholder will receive on their stock will depend on the number that wish to be included in the settlement.

However, persons who purchased stock from January to March 1984 should receive the greatest percentage of the settlement at 30 to 40 cents a share. Those who invested earlier, before the bank experienced the difficulty that led to its collapse, could get less than 5 cents a share.

The letter is the beginning of the end to three years of negotiations for the numerous civil lawsuits generated by the bank's closure in 1984 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The bank directors, who hold 40 percent of the stock, are excluded from the settlement.

The settlement does not affect the criminal indictment of two former bank officers and Newport Beach entrepreneur Leonard Levy.

A $6 million overdraft to Levy by the bank triggered an FDIC investigation and the bank's closure.

Cherry Hall group elects officers

ELECTIONS WERE held by the newly-formed Neighbors of Cherry Hall Association April 6.

Elected president was Clayton Anderson; vice president, Stephen Poohar; treasurer, Bob Rodden; secretary, Linda Anderson; and publicity chairman, Woody Salmonson.

The association also unanimously endorsed resolutions asking the city of Carmel to stop from selling or trading any city-owned property and will ask the city council to request Caltrans to develop a traffic pattern and signing of the Carpenter Street entrance to the city with respect to the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway. The association does not want Carpenter or Serra Avenue to become the primary entrance to Carmel after the freeway is built.

Meetings of the association are held at 7:30 p.m. the first Monday of the month at Cherry Hall. The next meeting is scheduled for May 4 and will include a discussion on Neighborhood Watch.

CVPOA to meet on April 15

THE CARMEL Valley Property Owners Association Board of Directors will meet Wednesday.

The meeting is set for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 15 at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church, Robinson Canyon Road in Carmel Valley.

Items to be discussed include water management, village improvement, roads and trails, wastewater, and the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Arrests (taken to jail) advanced from 144 to 189.

These are 1940 and 1941 figures for 12-month periods.

June, July, and August of the past year were especially heavy months for police duty, indicating that perhaps growth in the resident population represented but one side of the matter.

The more more things change — the more they stay the same.

Unlawful rentals

Dear Editor:

I wonder how many people are having the problems we are in our neighborhood with illegal short-term rentals. The city ordinance states that it's a misdemeanor to rent a residence for less than 30 days, whether it be the owner, tenant or real estate broker. In our situation I believe it to be the real estate agent who persists.

Across the street is a second home that is constantly being rented for short periods. The house has room for four couples and is sometimes full. One winter a group came twice that had a regular car, a four-wheel drive and a house trailer over 30 feet. The latter two left before dawn, noisily, just the way they do from motels on the highway, returned the same way, late.

During events like the Monterey Jazz Festival they arrive at different times the first night and thereafter all together as a noisy happy gang. When there's a golf tournament you get the excited camaraderie early on. Sometimes they come in airport vans that have a very special sliding door slam. Sometimes they bring a dog that gets lonesome being left behind, and howls.

There is no one in the house the way there is in a legitimate licensed inn — to be in charge to control and monitor situations.

I've complained for three years to no avail. In late Septembmer I wrote the city and the council describing our woes. The city administrator wrote and stated that he would bring the matter up in the November meeting. Our new council woman called to assure me of her concern — no action.

In December there were three rentals — the worst yet. In January I went to the city hall and spoke to two officials — was again assured of concern. In February there was a weekly plus a weekend rental. I was told by the planning department that a report had been made but there was no mention of it in the last Tuesday's agenda.

So...the only way left is the embarrassing way, which is to notify the renters, who are probably innocent and unaware that they are committing a nuisance by renting for less than 30 days.

I got my copy of the ordinance from the city hall: 17.08.020 "Transient use of dwelling units prohibited in all zoning districts." It can be posted, delivered, put on placards.

I hope if there are abuses the residents complain, loud and clear and persistently.

Animal suffering

Dear Editor:

It is a little distressing, not to say ironic, to see a charitable enterprise like Hospice exploiting the suffering of helpless animals to raise money for their charitable-to-humans activities. I refer to the auctioning of a mink coat, as pictured in your issue of the 19th of March.

Surely everyone who can read, and has an imagination, knows about the terrible suffering of animals that goes into every fur coat.

Whether it is trapping, or "ranching" of our animal friends, we are talking about an unspeakably cruel treatment of these, our fellow creatures.

Mink, like all weasels, are the very essence of movement. They are so fast moving they can hardly be photographed by the fastest of lenses. To imprison them in tiny cages, and then to end their miserable lives with a needle, or a smashing blow to the head is, to civilized persons, simply unacceptable.

I hope Hospice can find a more appropriate way to raise funds than to auction off a mink coat.

Is bigger better?

Dear Editor:

It seems that it is only human nature to want to change and improve things. Usually in the case of public facilities the cry is to make them bigger and more modern. However in the case of the Presbyterian Church here in Carmel, bigger in my opinion, will not be better.

The proposed improvements will not only destroy an architecturally beautiful and unique village church building, but will also adversely affect the church's neighbors by increasing traffic, parking and general congestion in the immediate vicinity of the church.

In a more general sense than ever — constant pressure to enlarge facilities here in Carmel works insidiously to destroy the very soul of the village.

It is unfortunate that Carmel can not accommodate all who would come. In our case geography prohibits continual growth.

Silver says Carmel Valley Master Plan legal

By DAVID LELAND

AN ALMOST 8-year-old injunction limiting development in Carmel Valley has been lifted by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver. Now, it's up to the county staff to figure out how to carry out the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The master plan twice before had come before Silver and both times he had sent it back to the county board of supervisors for further review.

But this Tuesday he gave the document his OK.

"The court finds that the environmental impact report and Carmel Valley Master Plan meet legal requirements," Silver wrote in his seven-page brief.

In his decision the judge also excluded the Odello property from the plan, saying it was a "legislative" not a "court" matter and up to the supervisors to decide the Odello's fate, not his. The Odellos propose to build a 162-unit subdivision on their land off Highway 1 south of Carmel.

When contacted, Bruna Odello said she was not jubilant, but instead was sad that the process had taken 25 years to come this far.

In March, the master plan had been challenged by attorneys Alexander Henson and Richard Rosenthal, who claimed, among other faults, that the plan's goals could not be carried out economically.

Rosenthal and Henson specifically pointed to the Hatton Canyon Freeway project, the four-laning of Carmel Valley Road, the sewering of Carmel Valley and the proposed New San Clemente Dam as examples of unfeasible projects.

The judge, however, disagreed.

"It is not true, as asserted by the petitioner at the hearing, that these mitigation measures are similar to transporting people to the moon in a rocket," he wrote. "Not one of these measures is inherently infeasible.

"In fact, the dam has been under consideration for some time, Hatton Canyon freeway is on the approved list of projects to be completed by the state and four-laning of parts of Carmel Valley Road are already in the five-year county works project."

Dissatisfied parties have 30 days in which to file an appeal.

At press time Rosenthal said he had not had time to review the brief and did not know if he would appeal the decision.

Meanwhile, 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman said she was elated that the injunction had been lifted and that the county could move ahead with the plan.

"After seven years of moratorium we all look forward to life returning to normal," she said.

Strasser Kauffman said she has four immediate tasks ahead of her — all will involve public hearings.

•

THE FIRST step is to form a subdivision allocation committee, to be composed of Carmel Valley residents, she said.

This committee will review each building permit and decide, with the help of a complicated 10-point rating system, which will be permitted.

A maximum of 49 units are permitted annually under the plan.

Strasser Kauffman said she will advertise for the committee and will make recommendations to the board of supervisors after she interviews the applicants.

Next, she said, the board needs to look for a "clearer delineation" of the trigger mechanisms contained in the plan.

Thus far the plan is unclear how problems of water, air, noise and other types of pollution will be monitored and at what level of toxic activity the county will be notified.

Strasser Kauffman said she will also form a Carmel Trails plan and a Carmel Village Master Plan committee, which will deal exclusively with that area.

Strasser Kauffman gave accolades to all those who have struggled through different stages of the plan.

"The credit goes to the county planning staff and to the public for working on the different policies to safeguard our future in this special place," she said.

Another major aspect of the plan which needs to be decided is what type of zoning the valley will have, according to J.R. Ramos, a county counsel representing the board with its plan.

Ramos said he thinks the valley will use Rural Allocation Zoning, which is related to a scenic construction zone.

He added that after eight years of working on the plan, he is glad the project will move to a different stage.

"I think it's wonderful that we can get to work implementing what I think is an excellent plan," he said.

•

JUDGE SILVER, in his decision, also addressed other objections by Rosenthal and Henson.

One of the complaints was that there was "insufficient analysis" of the potential growth-inducing impacts of the mitigation measures.

The judge points to the county's policy within the plan that says "Infrastructure improvements such as roads...shall be sized to serve only the desired level of growth as indicated by the overall quota and annual allocation.

"Further, even if more water might be available if the dam is built this would not permit greater development."

Another objection raised by the petitioner was the lack of standards associated with road and traffic conditions, but Silver disagreed.

"Any new project would require a project specific traffic study and a finding of whether the project would impact on traffic conditions," he wrote.

City council requires full EIR on Bennett property

By DAVID LELAND

AFTER ALMOST a year of haggling with city staff, attorney George Brehmer has been ordered by the Carmel City Council to prepare an environmental impact report for the Louise Bennett property.

Brehmer had attempted to persuade the council both Tuesday and at its last meeting to pursue one of two options for the 11-lot project located between Dolores and San Carlos streets.

He suggested the council either divide the parcel into upper and lower lots, with the upper land receiving a negative declaration so building could begin with the lower needing an EIR. Or, conduct a "focused EIR" for the entire project.

A focused EIR would have also allowed building to begin on all but three of the lots, which are on the downhill slope of the proposed development.

But the council, acting on the advice of City Atty. Don Freeman and city staff, rejected both of Brehmer's ideas and unanimously moved to require a complete EIR for the entire project.

The next move for the planning department will be to find an acceptable consultant to do the job, said Diane White, planning director. She said the entire process will take between four and six months and will be paid for by the developers.

Both Clayton Neill, city engineer, and residents had fought for the EIR because of the possible flood runoff and drainage problems during winter storms.

Those opposing the plan were vocal in their fears throughout Brehmer's journey from the planning commission to the city council, which began last July.

"Mr. Brehmer represents the interests of those who own the property," said J .S. Holiday, a Carmel resident. "It seems to me it's your (council) responsibility to see we do have an EIR."

But councilmembers were cautious and attempted to find a way to divide the parcel in two, but Freeman said this would not be in line with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), which states that if there is any disagreement on environmental concerns by experts, a complete EIR shall be required.

"If the experts disagree, we're pretty much obliged," said Mayor Clint Eastwood. "It's a rock and a hard place between Bennett concerns and public concerns."

Both Neill and engineer Carl Hooper, representing Bennett property owners, had disagreed on whether an EIR was required.

At least one councilmember, however, wanted full disclosure by the developers.

"I wonder what dark hallway will be found when we have one (EIR) done," said Councilman Bob Fischer.

Agreeing was Councilman Jim Wright.

"Based on comments from the public and staff, I feel an EIR would be prudent for this coucil to require," he said.

Perhaps the public sentiment was best summed up by longtime Carmel resident Francis "Skip" Lloyd.

"If you've got an unsolved problem you don't leave it until after you've approved the plan," he said.

Lloyd also said the delays have cost Brehmer as well as the concerned residents.

"It (EIR) could have been well on its way by now," he said.

LONG A point of angst for Mayor Clint Eastwood and the Carmel City Council, the Bennett property will have to produce an EIR before any development begins. Before March's council meeting councilmembers toured the property for a closer look. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Bank of Carmel shareholders settlement offer

NATIONAL BANK of Carmel shareholders may find a long-awaited letter in their mailbox this week.

The letter will outline an offer and request that the shareholder indicate whether he or she wishes to participate in a settlement.

The amount each shareholder will receive on their stock will depend on the number that wish to be included in the settlement.

However, persons who purchased stock from January to March 1984 should receive the greatest percentage of the settlement at 30 to 40 cents a share. Those who invested earlier, before the bank experienced the difficulty that led to its collapse, could get less than 5 cents a share.

The letter is the beginning of the end to three years of negotiations for the numerous civil lawsuits generated by the bank's closure in 1984 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The bank directors, who hold 40 percent of the stock, are excluded from the settlement.

The settlement does not affect the criminal indictment of two former bank officers and Newport Beach entrepreneur Leonard Levy.

A $6 million overdraft to Levy by the bank triggered an FDIC investigation and the bank's closure.

Cherry Hall group elects officers

ELECTIONS WERE held by the newly-formed Neighbors of Cherry Hall Association April 6.

Elected president was Clayton Anderson; vice president, Stephen Poohar; treasurer, Bob Rodden; secretary, Linda Anderson; and publicity chairman, Woody Salmonson.

The association also unanimously endorsed resolutions asking the city of Carmel to stop from selling or trading any city-owned property and will ask the city council to request Caltrans to develop a traffic pattern and signing of the Carpenter Street entrance to the city with respect to the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway. The association does not want Carpenter or Serra Avenue to become the primary entrance to Carmel after the freeway is built.

Meetings of the association are held at 7:30 p.m. the first Monday of the month at Cherry Hall. The next meeting is scheduled for May 4 and will include a discussion on Neighborhood Watch.

CVPOA to meet on April 15

THE CARMEL Valley Property Owners Association Board of Directors will meet Wednesday.

The meeting is set for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 15 at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church, Robinson Canyon Road in Carmel Valley.

Items to be discussed include water management, village improvement, roads and trails, wastewater, and the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Clint to Laub: Clintville is a blight on city

By DAVID LELAND

IN A nose-to-nose showdown at Tuesday's Carmel City Council meeting, Mayor Clint Eastwood lashed into businessman Paul Laub's Clintville T-shirt and trinket concession with a vengeance.

The action took place late in the council meeting as Laub took advantage of the public appearance segment to inform the mayor that the Carmel Youth Fund would receive no more contributions from him until the city dropped its lawsuit against him.

TIME HAS run out for Paul Laub's Clintville and the city's "King of Schlock," according to Mayor Clint Eastwood. Eastwood termed the merchandising tactics of Laub a "blight" on the community at this week's Carmel City Council meeting. (Holly McFarland photo.)

The city filed suit last year against Laub, citing that he did not have a proper business license to operate his basement retail area within Paradise, located on Ocean Avenue.

"I think Clintville is distasteful," said Eastwood, whose voice took on the low, raspy tone of his movie characters. "It's a blight on the community and it's a blight on me."

Laub said between May and December of 1986 he had contributed $38,000 to the youth fund, which helps keep the Carmel Youth Center afloat. The youth center has been a pet project of Eastwood's since he took office one year ago.

Now, Laub said he has opened a special account at County Bank with $5,750 earmarked for legal fees instead of the youth fund. He estimates the total legal fees for the city's lawsuit will soar to between $30,000 and $40,000 before the suit ends.

Meanwhile, Laub said he will continue to sell Eastwood T-shirts, bumper stickers, buttons and assorted trinkets to finance his attorney fees.

"During the campaign we discussed that you would continue to make movies and I would continue to sell T-shirts," Laub said.

But Eastwood does not agree.

"I don't think it's fair to tread on someone's name like that," he said. "He (Laub) doesn't have the right to sell me."

Laub is the only retailer within the business district who still sells "Clint" paraphernalia. Last fall, Eastwood went before the Carmel Business Association and asked its members to stop exploiting his name for the good of the community.

Eastwood told Laub he was especially offended by women's underwear sold by the businessman that has the words "Make my night" stitched into it.

"What was fun during the election is now a blight on the community," he said.

But Laub told the The Pine Cone after the council meeting that he did not understand Eastwood's modesty.

"I never knew he didn't like the panties," he said. "I feel it's kind of funny that he portrays sex and violence in his movies."

•

MEANWHILE, THE lawsuit between the city and Laub is at a standstill because of Laub's recent three-month stay in Hawaii.

The next stage of the proceedings is to take depositions; this has been impossible because of Laub's absence. But now city officials expect the legal work to move ahead.

Laub claims the city staff has taken a personal vendetta against him and is trying to have him shut down because of his flamboyant style.

"I must say that I feel that this suit has come about because the tail of the government (city staff) is wagging the body of the government, which I characterize as the elected council," he said.

But Eastwood disagreed.

"The city is not suing to shut down Clintville," he said. "The city is suing Mr. Laub because he did not get a business license."

Laub said he has a permit to sell whatever he choses within the store and the city has no right to regulate him. He added that he had hoped to contribute between $40,000 and $60,000 to the youth fund in 1987.

The other councilmembers stayed clear of the fracas at Tuesday's meeting and listened impassively as Laub summed up his statement.

"The city has been very wrong here," he said. "Let's admit to the errors. It takes strength of character to handle them and weakness to hide them.

"If you don't rectify the wrong and the court does, I think you will have built yourselves a reputation for having pride where rectitude should be at the expense of the people of the city, who will be the ultimate payers of the price."

Laub said if the city loses he will show actual damages in excess of $75,000, which he claimed could make the city's legal fees in the neighborhood of $150,000.

BUSINESSMAN PAUL Laub informed the mayor this week that he no longer will contribute to the city's Youth Fund, and instead will direct earnings from his Clintville store toward legal fees to fight the city's lawsuit against him.

Water issue protagonists will square off on TV

By NANCY HILLS

THERE'S LESS than a cast of thousands, but the names involved could provide a big draw.

Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood, State Sen. Henry Mello, Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Chairman Dick Heuer, Sierra Club representative Dale Hekhuis and building trade representative Doyle Fikes will all appear on television (KSBW Channel 8) at 7 p.m., Tuesday, April 14 for a peninsula water issues round table discussion.

Mello initiated the legislation that created the water district in 1978 and has had ongoing discussions with Eastwood since the city imposed a building moratorium last year.

Mello, in an interview with The Carmel Pine Cone, espoused the concept of a fluctuating cap on water production based on a three to five-year average water supply (based on rainfall).

Currently, the district has set a production limit of 20,000 acre feet using a figure derived from a 1976 Public Utilities Commission (PUC) estimate of the water supply during a year of normal rainfall. That is a "paper number," Mello said.

When using a flexible water production ceiling, Mello said, if the water demand exceeds supply, it can be cut back through rationing and conservation.

The district has maintained that demand should remain at a point that keeps the shortage during a drought at a mininum. The district estimates that with the current demand — about 17,600 acre feet — a repeat of 1976-1977 conditions would create a 25 percent shortage.

Raising the production limit, Heuer said, is "dependent on how vulnerable we want to leave the community." The greater the demand the greater the shortage in lean rainfall years and the greater the environmental damage, Heuer said.

The district also bases its total peninsula water allowance on the needs for growth, the current demand and the environmental needs, Heuer explained, and until there is a new water supply, he believes there is not enough in the water system to increase the yield.

As more water is taken from the Carmel Valley aquifer the more environmental damage is experienced in the valley.

Reviewing the allocation system with more up-to-date numbers, Mello said, would probably be a good idea.

The allocation system divides the total allowed production between the district's cities, Monterey County and unmetered water use. Carmel, which exceeded its allotment last year, is presently engaged in a lawsuit with the district about the allocation.

Mello said he also believes that water conservation is an important part of water management.

"We use far too much water right now," he observed.

•

THE SENATOR has approached the district about changing board elections, a position also favored by Eastwood.

Now, the board members are elected at large, but Mello said he has been approached by people who are interested in changing that system to electing board members by "wards" within the district. He would not identify those who have asked him to look into the matter.

"Just like a reporter, I have to protect my sources," he said.

"It just so happens that on the current board five out of seven of the members live in Carmel Valley (Heuer, Pat Bernardi, Nick Lombardo, Karin Strasser Kauffman, John Williams), while the greater part of the population in the district is located in Seaside, Pacific Grove and Monterey," Mello said.

Through "redistricting," Mello said, those areas may be able to get more representation.

"That's no reflection on the conduct of the current board," he added, however.

In fact, Mello said he is "happier" with the progress of the board in its last four years than he was with the first six years. Now, the environmental impact report on the dam is moving along, he said.

EIR workshop on April 14

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District board will conduct a workshop for the New San Clemente Dam environmental impact report at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, April 14 in Seaside City Council Chambers.

The workshop will address several important topics that must be clarified before formally describing the proposed New San Clemente Project in the EIR/EIS. District staff will summarize corrections made to the computer model since the calibration workshop March 10.

In addition, staff will review how recent geological research in the Seaside groundwater basin led to the decision to reduce storage and safe yield values for the Seaside Coastal Aquifer in the model. Staff will also explain when and how surface and groundwater sources will be used to meet demand.

The board will consider variations of a new rationing scheme that is applicable to a broad range of potential drought situations. The board will select a rationing scenario based on its performance and impact on the public. Factors to be considered include intensity and duration of rationing events as well as end-of-year water reserves.

An important component of the New San Clemente Project is facilities for steelhead trout. Fishery and engineering experts will present their findings on the cost-effectiveness and implications of building a hatchery at the base of the new dam versus building various fish passage facilities to enable up and downstream migration over the the dam. Advantages and disadvantages of each alternative will be discussed. The board will identify which concept is preferred, based on this information.

New performing arts center favored by area residents

By DAVID LELAND

A TELEPHONE survey seeking public sentiment on theater expansion at Sunset Center shows the majority of peninsula residents favoring a new, larger facility.

Conducted by San Francisco-based Peabody Marketing Group, results of the $25,000 survey — which took three months to complete — were unveiled Tuesday in a special meeting of the Carmel City Council.

No action was taken by the council at Tuesday's meeting. The matter will be addressed again at a later date, according to Doug Schmitz, city administrator.

The proposed $10 million theater project includes the 1,500-seat Stanton Theater, town hall on the lower floor, rehearsal space and two activity rooms.

The report was financed in part by the city — which donated $10,000 to the cause in August — and from private donations.

The study, which polled 420 people in Carmel, Pebble Beach, Monterey, Carmel Valley and Pacific Grove, indicates that 72 percent of those quizzed favored a new facility.

"It was so amazing (72 percent in favor)," said Virginia Stanton, wife of late architect Robert Stanton and member of Friends of Sunset Center. "Naturally I was thrilled and delighted."

Currently the theater at Sunset Center seats 733 persons, which many feel is not large enough to attract major acts or even accomodate the people who wish to attend performances now offered.

Those favoring a new theater said they thought this would increase Carmel's ability to attract better national groups and, a larger hall would have a beneficial effect on its cultural reputation in the area.

For the 15 percent opposing the plan, primary reasons for doubt included worries of too much traffic and a general feeling that Carmel should not grow any larger.

In an effort to control traffic and parking, the city has begun taking bids for the construction of an underground parking garage at the north end of the Sunset Center, which would accomodate about 300 cars.

Another worry expressed regarding the proposed expansion was that there was not a need for Carmel to have a large facility because of Sherwood Hall in Salinas, which seats about 1,500.

But the survey showed that peninsula residents are unwilling to travel on the dangerous Highway 68 to Salinas and would rather attend performances in Carmel.

Also the events offered at Sherwood Hall did not address the same musical and artistic tastes that are found in the peninsula resident, it's argued.

•

ANOTHER DIRECT recipient of a larger theater would be local and touring art groups who say they would use the theater.

Richard Mickely of Peabody Marketing said his study conducted 35 interviews of user groups and various heads of performing arts facilities.

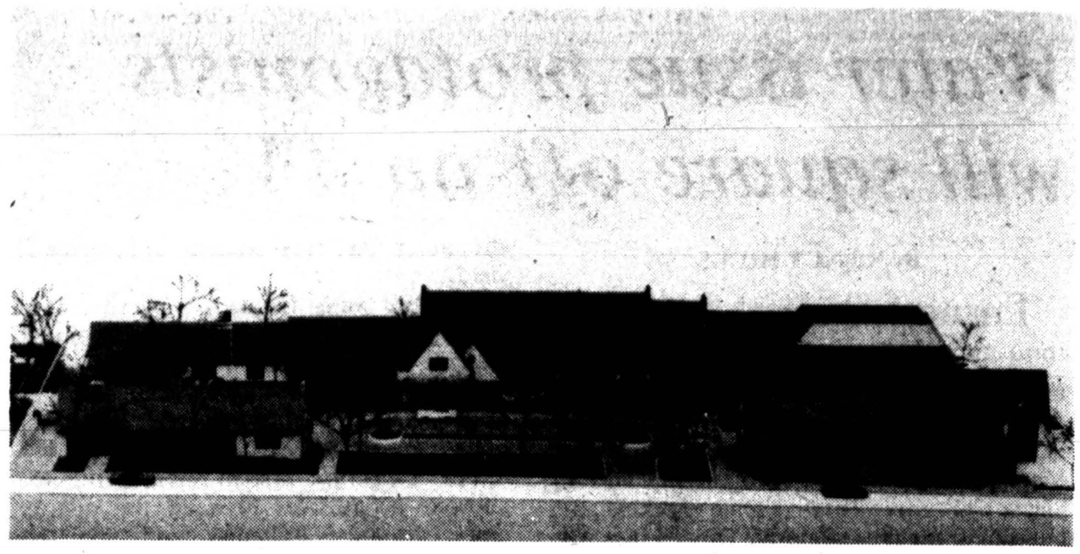
A likely level of use by the 11 local and touring groups polled range from one to 24 performances during the theater's first year with 115 performances and 87 rehearsals estimated for that time for a total of 244 uses.

Currently there are 166 performances each year at Sunset Center, but in a short period of time this number will creep up, Mickley said.

Within five years the number of performances will rise to 187 as the Frohman Academy becomes fully established and operates at its anticpated level.

Also, more than half of the area's residents said they would be willing to pay $4 more per ticket in order to see a local group perform at the facility to offset theater expenses.

All of the user groups favored the center being located in Carmel as they believe that Carmel has been the historical seat of culture on the peninsula and should remain so.



THE RESULTS are in from the feasibility study regarding a proposed $10 million construction project to expand Sunset Center facilities, with the majority of Monterey Peninsula residents favoring the project.

Other results of the survey include:

• More than 85 percent of those who have attended at least one local event over the past year have been to Sunset Center during that time.

This illustrates that a pattern of going to Sunset Center for cultural events has already been established by residents of the area.

• Even those who stated that they normally do not attend performing arts events said they would be likely to attend some events at the new center.

Of those who stated they do not attend performing arts events because they are not interested in what's available, 47 percent said they would be likely to attend plays and musicals in the new hall.

In total, 90 percent indicated some interest in attending some sort of performing arts event at a new theater.

• Big-name stars would attract new audiences. About 87 percent of those polled said they would be interested in attending performances at the new theater by national touring groups.

• Just over 50 percent of the respondents favor increasing the financial support by the city should it be necessary to cover any operating deficit. Residents of Carmel are even more supportive, with 60 percent favoring city funding.

THOUGH IT is unclear whether the city will contribute to the construction of the theater, the Friends of Sunset Center have taken the feasibility study as an indication of support for the project and are planning a fund-raising campaign.

"We had played it (fund-raising) down because we did not want it to be a political issue," said Stanton, who began her interest in the project in October of 1985.

The group's first move has been to set up an office at Sunset Center, where members will organize their efforts. The phone number is 624-9570.

"What we're going to do now is set up committees," said Burney Threadgill, president of the Friends of Sunset Center. "Predominantly we want local people."

Calling the study a "springboard," Stanton said they will have a fund-raising committee selected by the end of April.

The first order at hand, Threadgill said, is to select a person to be in charge of fund-raising. He would not speculate on possible choices.

Threadgill said the Friends of Sunset Center would not only try to raise the $10 million needed for construction of the new theater, but would also try to raise an additional $10 million to maintain operational expenses.

Council again rejects church expansion plans

By DAVID LELAND

IN A replay of its March decision denying any further expansion at the Carmel Presbyterian Church, the Carmel City Council Tuesday nixed the church's "new" findings and denied its request.

Church officials had sought the council's permission to add a second story and underground parking garage at its Mountain View and Junipero avenues location.

At its March meeting councilmembers decided that any further expansion at the church would "encroach" on the neigborhood, and would go against the city's general plan.

The church appealed the decision and argued its point Tuesday before the council — to no avail.

This time the church said they would use less water if it expanded and would not use any more parking places.

But after its brief presentation, resident Howard Nieman referred to the same issue that came up in the March appeal.

"We need to refocus on the real issue at hand: land use," he said "None of the issues raised deal with conformity to the municipal code."

Nieman said he was also concerned that the church had come up with "new" findings only two days after the council had made its decision last month.

Jane Mayer, a longtime resident, suggested to churchmembers that they participate in the current hearings on the general plan revision. That way they could possibly change the code to allow their expansion.

"I've agonized, but I've heard nothing new to change my opinion," said Councilman Bob Fischer.

Added Councilman Jim Wright "I've come to the conclusion that it was intended that there not be any expansion."

The council voted unanimously to deny the request.

•

IN OTHER action, the council:

• Denied (4-1, with Wright dissenting) a request by resident Barbara Brooks for the city to conduct another questionnaire on city opinion.

Brooks said there is insufficeient data for the general plan committee to pull from when trying to understand residents' views.

Although the council denied the request, Mayor Clint Eastwood said he was going to check into the details of hiring an outside firm to come up with a new survey.

"An expert from the outside can be more objective so it doesn't get loaded up," he said.

Much of the public testimony and council discussion centered on the general plan committee's problem of having an accurate reflection of public opinion. But the council voted against the issue so general plan hearings would not be delayed.

"From a public relations standpoint it makes a lot of sense to have the general plan refer to questions that have been accepted by the community," Wright said.

Only Councilman Bob Fischer seemed against the possibility of a survey in the future.

"I'm flatly against another questionnaire," he said. "Carmel has been questioned to death."

• The council appointed Fischer and Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo to study the possible effects of putting a window in Toots Lagoon restaurant building, plus a public restroom overlooking Piccadilly Park.

General Plan revision hearings will continue April 15 and 25

By NANCY HILLS

COME ONE, come all — the General Plan revision review continues on April 15.

The Carmel Planning Commission and General Plan Review Committee will begin its discussion of the text portion of the plan at 3 p.m., Wednesday, April 15 in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center. A second session has been scheduled for 9 a.m., Saturday, April 25 in Carpenter Hall.

The general plan text contains the data, philosophy and discussions of issues that are codified in the goals, objectives and policies sections.

A limited number of copies of the changed text are available at City Hall.

The text is "very significant" and "where the philosophic changes are reflected," said Carmel resident Howard Nieman who has spent hours going over the proposed changes.

"The basic change is to refocus the city with respect to planning the city's immediate policies and long-term direction," Nieman said.

The meeting will begin with the introduction of the plan, which includes the descriptions of its purpose, function and planning background. No changes, with the exception of references to the 1982 questionnaire, have been made in this portion of the plan.

The committee added a paragraph that questions the "sole reliance" of the original plan on the questionnaire.

"The lack of factual information relevant to both sides of various issues may have tended to produce a subjective or emotional response on some of them (answers). Some answers are inconsistent within themselves, an example being that only about 10 percent of the respondents use public transit regularly, yet 72 percent said it is adequate. Some replies previously considered to represent 'overwhelming' feeling of the community may in fact be less positive when allowance is made for the phraseology of the questions and the number who failed to respond. The questionnaire should be viewed with these caveats," the added text states.

Other sections, such as the Community Profile, which are not part of specific elements, are updated with current economic and population statistics.

Some of the most substantial changes in the text are found in the Land Use Element.

An example of changes in the Land Use Element, start in the Issues of Local Significance section where paragraphs have been deleted referring to attitudes toward the commercial district.

References to the community wishing to restrict certain businesses and that the community feels there is too much commercial use in the city have been changed to:

"The mix of commercial uses for Carmel should be carefully considered and effort should be made to encourage a mix that is beneficial to the City. This effort should also promote and encourage more resident-serving commercial uses, and in general high quality business."

Also, specific references to Ocean Avenue land use patterns have been deleted in that section, though it is referred to later in the element in a section called Preservation of the Central Business District.

An entire section on residentially-oriented businesses that stated residents go outside of Carmel for their goods because of lack of those types of businesses in town, parking, traffic congestion and higher prices because of higher rents has been changed to:

"As indicated in the 1980 Carmel Local Coastal Prgram Land Use Plan, the city 'has a much higher number of service and retail-oriented businesses relative to the population base than either Monterey or Seaside.' Price, convenience, variety and easy parking at major retail centers outside of Carmel have motivated many Carmel residents to travel outside the City for groceries, fuel, and other household items. Most residents travel outside the community for these essential goods and services because businesses of this scale are not permitted in Carmel."

References to zoning to "greater control the intensity, number, type and orientation of commercial uses in Carmel" have been deleted, though statements about containment of the commercial district in its present boundaries have been retained.

TRAVEL The great escape

Crossroads Travel sponsoring golf tour to Scotland, Ireland

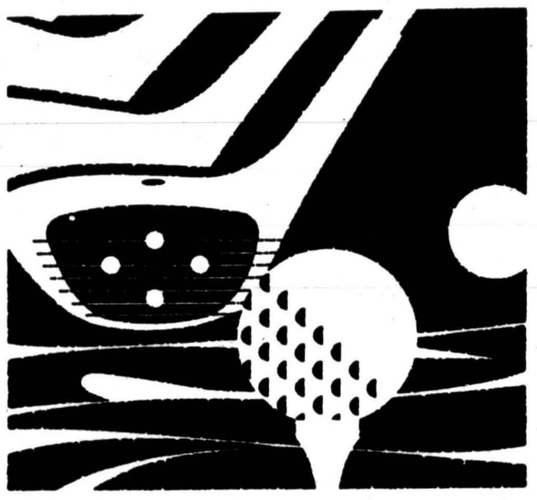
Crossroads Travel is presenting a second golf tour to Ireland and Scotland departing in July 1987. Featured on this particular tour are five of the top golf courses in Ireland.

Lahinch, known as the "St. Andrews of Irish golf," provides a fierce challenge to the golfer's skill while providing him with breathtaking views of some of the best golfing country that nature ever produced.

Ballybunion is another course on the tour — one of the finest links courses in the world overlooking the Atlantic Ocean. With the lake and the Kerry mountains as a backdrop the group will play the Killarney Killeen course.

Moving to the eastern part of Ireland the group will play the longest and most rigorous test of golf in the country — Portmarnock. Arnold Palmer calls it "the best in the world."

The final stop in Ireland will bring the golfers to the Royal Dublin Course, which has hosted many major championships, including the Irish Open. While in Ireland the group will be staying at Dromoland Castle and the Westbury Hotel.



Upon arriving in Scotland the group will stay at the Turnberry Hotel and play the famous Ailsa course, the scene of the 1986 British Open which saw Greg Norman capture his first major title.

"Tam Arte Quam Marte" — "As Much By Skill as By Strength" is the club motto at Troon, another course to be visited by the group.

Carnoustie, which is reputed to have the toughest finish in golf and is one of the oldest courses in Scotland, is on the itinerary at the request of many of the golfers who were on the last trip.

Rounding out the trip, the group will play the famed "Old Course" at St. Andrews where golf was first recorded to have been placed in 1457! Muirfield or Gullane will be available for those golfers whose skill and handicap permit. The group will be staying at the Old Course Golf and Country Club while in the St. Andrews area.

A full round of sightseeing and special activities have been arranged for the non-golfers in the group. Leading the tour will be Al Krueger, golf professional at the Round Hill Golf and Country Club. Al did this tour two years ago and is familiar with all the courses to be played.

Green fees, hotels, meals, transportation and special banquets are included in the price. The tour is limited to 28 persons and there is still some space available. Further information can be obtained by calling Crossroads Travel at 624-5434.

Bob McGinnis Travel answers questions on cruise vacations

Bob McGinnis Travel answers the most commonly asked questions about cruise vacations:

What's there to do on a cruise? Won't I get bored?

Hardly. Being at sea gives you a feeling of freedom few places can offer. There's plenty of room. And it'll probably take you two or three days just to discover what's on board.

On a modern-day cruise ship, you'll have the opportunity to roam and enjoy all the public rooms and deck space. Plus the added adventure of exploring new and exciting ports of call — either on your own or on a guided tour with your shipmates.

Cruise ships are like floating resorts, with all the things fine resorts have to offer. You can be by yourself and lie back on a lounge chair, breathe in the sea air, soak up the sun, read good books or watch the ever-changing view. Or you can join in the early morning exercise classes, dance classes, sports contest and other organized deck activities. You can practice your tennis strokes and putting, drive golf balls, and shoot skeet. You can go for a swim, stretch out in the sauna or work out in the gym. You can take in a feature movie, listen to a lecture, or play backgammon or bridge. You'll find there isn't time to be bored, but there's always plenty of time to relax and have fun. No matter what kind of fun and relaxation you enjoy.

Are there medical services on board?

Every cruise ship has a fully-equipped medical facility and staff to handle almost any emergency should something unexpected occur.

How do I book a cruise?

See Bob McGinnis Travel, we offer a selection of cruises that fits your vacation schedule, tastes and pocketbook. Bob McGinnis Travel will make all the arrangements needed to get you from your doorsteps to your stateroom.

CARMEL HERITAGE

By Betty Barron

Back to beginnings

IT WAS the year 1774. On the eastern seaboard of our county men were struggling against the bonds of England and reaching decisions which would change forever the face and character of our land, but here in Carmel, peace and quiet reigned under the warm California sunshine.

And, a little cottage was built near the edge of a thriving pear orchard beyond the Carmel Mission. The cottage was to house the orchard caretaker, whose 360 pear trees dotted the land which is now the Little League playing field. The two acres of land surrounding the present house and smaller adjacent houses, added later, once included the eight pear tree acres.

Originally merely two medium-sized rooms built along the adobe orchard wall, the "cottage" forms the entrance hall and a portion of the living room of the home now owned by John Keller and Lewis Scott, also owners of Keller and Scott Antiques on Dolores Street in Carmel. Two unglazed windows, shuttered with rawhide hinges, still remain in this section of the house.

Harry Downie, responsible for the restoration of Carmel Mission before his death in 1980, believed the orchard wall of the home to be the second oldest piece of building...an older part is the section of "wall," now part of the Blessed Sacrament Chapel, located between the Mission Rectory and the gift shop.

Of the 360 pear trees, correctly named "Little Pears of St. John," four trees remain, casting gentle shade upon the garden next to the house.

Seen today, the house reveals the imprint of several expansions. From the old adobe portion, part of the adobe wall, has evolved an early Victorian of beautifully weathered redwood, built between 1858-1880 by Christiano Machado. Legend has it that this Victorian addition was built on a foundation of whale vertebrae. Not to be forever uncertain of this bit of undocumented data, Dick Tevis one day went underneath the house and verified the existence of whale bones.

Christiano Machado was also a digger of sorts, too...and aided Father Angelo Casanova in discovering Father Serra's body.

In about 1925, after the Machados, a Father Mestres, who was interested in activating the Carmel Mission, put a new roof on the orchard house. Later, both houses were sold to Eva de Sabla, first mayor of Carmel, and Clarabelle Haydock. They lived in the Victorian house and turned the adobe into a restaurant, which they called the Mission Tea House. (The forerunner of the Mission Ranch dining room?)

In 1930 the two ladies sold the property to Lloyd Tevis, and it was referred to as The Tevis House until it was purchased by Keller and Scott in 1979. Since that time Keller and Scott have restored the old adobe portion, not modernizing, but making additions such as electric lighting within the walls so as not to disturb the original ambiance of the house. They have tastefully retained all the charm of the the two houses, as well as restoring the gardens. And, quite naturally, the contents of the rooms are unparalleled in authenticity and livability.

Since the original El Camino Real began at the Carmel Mission, threading its way northward through San Juan Bautista, and has now become a busy highway to San Francisco, the old road which ran beside the wall and the house and into what is now the Mission parking lot and driveway (the section next to the house) is the only unpaved part of El Camino Real remaining. Even the barely discernible strip of faint wagon tracks along the edge of a field below the old wine tasting room and grape arbor in San Juan Buatista have been paved over in recent years.

Therefore, not only is our oldest house in Carmel an important bit of California history, so is the narrow strip of land binding the house to the Carmel Mission. The entire lovely setting is well cared for now after its tumultuous and varied life and, hopefully will remain for many generations.

County mayors ask for more water for Carmel

By NANCY HILLS

THE MAYOR'S Select Committee has asked, in a letter to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, that the district add 100 acre feet to Carmel's annual water allocation.

The letter also asks that the water board consider the request at its first April board meeting.

The item has been added to the agenda that already includes a $650,000 conservation program and districtwide retrofit ordinance which also could provide additional water for Carmel.

The water board will meet at 7:30 p.m., Monday, April 13 in the Monterey City Council Chambers.

The conservation discussion will focus on a proposed retrofit ordinance and a program to distribute conservation kits free to every resident in the district.

The board will consider the April 3 decision of the Mayor's Select Committee, an independent organization, to formally request the district add 100 acre feet from its drought reserve to Carmel's 1,030.8 acre feet allotment.

Sand City mayor and mayor's representative to the water management board, David Pendergrass, said he requested the select committee make the request because "Carmel is in a strait jacket."

Carmel suspended issuing building permits last year after it exceeded its annual water district allocation and has filed a lawsuit against the district's allocation system. The city council will consider releasing building permits on numerous projects currently in limbo in May.

Pendergrass added that if the situation continues, "the courts will decide our land use policies" which will lead to a "snowballing effect."

The first court hearing was conducted March 29 before Monterey Superior Court Judge Richard Silver, who set another settlement hearing date April 15. If no settlement is reached between the agencies, the court will meet April 29 to decide if all administrative remedies have been exhausted and there is cause for a lawsuit.

Carmel asked the water district board for 100 acre feet earlier this year, but the board determined that to expand the total allocation would require an environmental impact report.

The scope of that EIR, which was proposed earlier this year, will also be discussed at the board meeting. The proposed report would include gauging the environmental effect of increasing water demand limits.

•

THE DISTRICTWIDE conservation ordinance and kit distribution program will also be a major focus for the board this month.

At the April 13 meeting, the water board will review and take comments on the program and ordinance. The "first reading" to make it law is scheduled for April 30 at a special board meeting.

Water district general manager Bruce Buel explained that the district hopes to join with Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency in purchasing the kits, which include two 2.5-gallon-per-minute shower heads and toilet tank dams.

There are 43,000 residences in the water management district, Buel said, and the district will purchase and distribute the kits, then conduct a follow-up to insure installation.

The total cost of the program is $650,000, he said, which would be paid through a user fee already collected for the district by California American Water Co.

The fee is for the Carmel River Management Program, but collection has exceeded the legal limit for the program by approximately $50,000 a year.

The district would float a bond to pay for the conservation program, which it would pay back through the Carmel River Management Program user fee.

The same type of distribution program was carried out in San Jose with a 90 percent compliance record, Buel said.

If most of the kits are installed, Buel said, the district can save about 1,000 acre feet of water.

Carmel, which is near 100 percent of its yearly water allocation, could save 50 acre feet on the program, he added.

"People can also save $140 a year on their energy bill if they use the kit," Buel said.

The board will also consider an ordinance that:

- Requires all homes and commercial properties to retrofit to 1.5-gallon toilets when sold or, in a business, when the use changes.
- Retrofit when a bathroom is added or remodeled or there is an addition of more than 20 percent to a home.
- All hotels retrofit to 1.5-gallon-per-flush toilet and 2.5-gallon-per-minute showerheads in 90 days.

Michael Ricker, demand management coordinator for the district, said there will be a seminar about ultra-low-flush toilets at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, May 6 at the Doubletree Inn in Monterey.

Youth cheerleader training scheduled

TRAINING FOR Monterey Peninsula Youth Football cheerleading squads will be held every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings through May 1.

A series of training sessions to teach potential cheerleading applicants tryout routines will be held at 5:30 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at the Carmel Youth Center gym, Fourth and Torres, from April 20 through May 1.

Tryouts are scheduled for 9 a.m. Saturday, May 2 at the Carmnel Youth Center gym. Boys and girls between the ages of 9 and 13 as of Aug. 1 and living in Carmel, Carmel Valley, Pacific Grove, Pebble Beach and Monterey, are invited to try out. No previous experience is required.

Sacrifices to the God of Speed

By Harold Gilliam (Reprinted from The San Francisco Chronicle, March 8, 1987)

Presented by the SAVE HATTON CANYON FUND, P.O. Box 2971, Carmel, Ca. 93921, which asks that you contribute whatever you can to help in the effort to save that Carmel which all the world treasures.

This is a story of a proposed freeway, and it is a story of how obsolete ways of thinking can trip us up as we enter a new phase of American history.

After a hiatus of nearly 20 years, the California freeway builders are back in business, mostly at work on jobs that have badly needed to be done, such as the elimination of "blood alley," the old narrow stretch of Highway 101 near San Jose.

In places where they are invading virgin territory, however, opening new areas to freeway access, they are capable of doing as much damage as the state engineers of a generation ago. Those engineers were determined to lay great swaths of concrete through fields, hills and valleys, cities and villages, all in the interest of speeding the flow of automobile traffic to almost everywhere. There was little or no regard to the damage to California's urban and natural landscapes, either directly from the freeways themselves or indirectly from the haphazard suburbanization induced by the pouring of hordes of automobiles into pastoral areas.

On paper, the proposed Hatton Canyon freeway near Carmel looks good. It would bypass the congested section of State Highway 1 where an existing freeway, rising over the hill from Monterey toward Carmel, becomes an ordinary four-lane highway with signal lights to permit cross traffic at two intersections. It then narrows to two lanes as it descends to the mouth of the Carmel Valley, and continues as two lanes down the Big Sur coast.

Since the ill-advised urbanization of the flat area at the mouth of the valley in the 1960s and '70s (on the dangerous flood-plain of the Carmel River) and the mushrooming of subdivisions farther up the valley, traffic at peak hours piles up at the stoplights and moves at a stop-and-go pace through the two-lane section. The continuing development of the valley promises to increase the congestion.

What could be more logical than to by pass this bottleneck by building a two-mile freeway through almost-uninhabited Hatton Canyon, which parallels Highway 1 on the east?

If your only objective is to move traffic as fast as possible, the proposal makes sense. If you're concerned with other values, such as respect for the landscape, the decision is not so easy.

Consider this passage from the Caltrans Draft Environmental Impact Report: "Hatton Canyon...is a relatively pristine canyon containing one of the increasingly rare stands of native Monterey pine forest in the Monterey area. The mosaic of Monterey pine forest, coastal sage scrubland, annual grasslands covering the canyon slopes, and the dense riparian woodland lining the canyon floor, creates a natural viewscape that is rare in this urbanized area..."

Actually the canyon is not uninhabited, as the report points out: "Hatton Canyon supports a variety of high-value wildlife habitat. The riparian woodland provides important nesting and feeding habitat for a large number of resident and migratory fowl as well as a water supply for other wildlife species."

The canyon is not undisturbed; manhole covers at intervals along the trail give evidence of an underground sewer line, but nature has managed to heal most of the wounds. It is a place where you can walk with a quiet mind, mostly out of sight of civilization, open to the influences of the woods and hills and wildlife.

Blacktailed deer come down to the stream to drink; hawks soar overhead; the song of the white-crowned sparrow is heard, as well as the haunting, musical call of Swainson's thrush. Rabbits, raccoons, and possums live in the brushy areas; in the pine woods you might hear a great horned owl, watch a Western gray squirrel, hear a woodpecker's rat-tat-tat on a tree trunk.

"The loss of 160 acres of wildlife habitat," the report continues, "contributes to the ongoing loss of habitat through urbanization of the Monterey Peninsula area."

Trees that would fall to the Caltrans loggers and bulldozers include 8,500 mature Monterey pines, 1,800 mature oaks and 6,000 seedlings. "The native Monterey pine forest in Hatton Canyon," the report declares, "is part of the largest of the three remaining native Monterey pine populations in California. The Monterey pine population is rapidly being reduced in size and integrity by the urbanization of the area."

Caltrans would "mitigate" the loss of these trees by planting new trees elsewhere. But the report admits that the freeway "would convert a relatively undisturbed, visually sensitive canyon to a transportation facility with major cuts and fills...and would contribute to the ongoing visual urbanization of the Carmel area."

Nevertheless, the report implies that a "sensitive canyon," must be sacrificed because the present road "does not provide the necessary capacity on this section of Highway 1 to accommodate predicted traffic from proposed development."

The issue seems clear. Should this rare natural enclave in a rapidly urbanizing area be destroyed to save motorists a few minutes' driving time?

Under the assumptions that prevailed almost unchallenged on the American scene until the last decade or two, the answer could only be affirmative. The Hatton Canyon freeway was first authorized in the 1950s and reflects the outmoded thinking of the era.

The newer view that is growing nationally in our own time has roots in the Carmel area. During the '50s, when the freeway engineers were remaking the American landscape, their bulldozers moving over the hill from Monterey were halted by the protests of residents of Carmel, historically the first community anywhere to question the benefits of mechanized "progress."

As a result, Highway 1 from Carmel through Big Sur was the first route to be deleted from the state freeway plan. The challenge was taken up by San Francisco, and the city rejected plans for cross-town freeways to connect the bridges. Residents decided it was better to put up with slower traffic than to blight several neighborhoods, Golden Gate Park and the northern waterfront.

The stub ends of the Embarcadero and Central freeways still stand as monuments to a new civic wisdom. Other communities around the nation observed and emulated this successful resistance to the bulldozers, and the supremacy of the freeway engineers began to decline nationwide, along with the mentality that placed highway speed above all other considerations.

Carmel's ex-mayor, Gunnar Norberg, that battle-scarred veteran of a 30-year war to keep the Carmel region from being overrun by progress, is once again raising his voice against extension of the Highway 1 freeway beyond the point where he led the successful fight to stop it a quarter-century ago. His health does not permit him to campaign as he once did, and he is passing the torch to Philip T. Foss, head of the local homeowner's association.

Hatton Canyon is not the only alternative discussed in the Caltrans report, but it is clearly the one preferred by the state engineers. Foss and Norberg favor instead the alternative of widening the present road where it narrows to two lanes — in an existing right-of-way capable of accommodating four. The widening would cost only $3 million to $9 million, compared with $23 million to $29 million for the new freeway — a consideration that cannot be ignored in an era of unprecedented government debt.

The Environmental Protection Agency, alarmed at the potential damage to Hatton Canyon, also favors the widening alternative rather than the freeway. Disadvantages of that alternative include removal of about 100 trees partially screening the present road from homes on both sides, a prospect that understandably alarms roadside residents. And four-laning the present stretch of road would provide less "efficient" traffic movement than a Hatton Canyon freeway. But what price speed? Experienced commuters now encounter peak-hour delays of four minutes or so. How many trees and how much wildlife are to be sacrificed to save commuters how many minutes?

The Caltrans report contains ample hints of the future "need" for freeways up Carmel Valley and southward on Highway 1 to serve projected development. The history of freeway construction is clear. More freeways induce more traffic and more growth that creates a demand for more freeways.

Perhaps the price of living in any rural or semi-rural area on the urban fringe is less-than-high-speed transportation — if the area is to remain rural.

The new American concern for the total environment, the realization that remaining natural landscapes near booming urban areas will be almost literally priceless in the super-crowded California of the 21st Century, the burgeoning knowledge that humans are part of the community of life on Earth and need to experience and understand its natural systems, the recognition that a less frenzied pace of life and greater exposure to the influences of nature can enrich and deepen the quality of living — these considerations throw doubt on decisions to sacrifice any natural area to the false gods of speed.

CITIZENRY TO HELP RAISE AIRPORT FUNDS

By means of public subscription, funds are to be raised here to meet Carmel's share of the $4,200 needed to complete the Monterey airport. By representatives of Monterey, official sponsor of the airport WPA project, the city council was asked several months ago to appropriate a portion of this sum as a donation toward and improvement which will benefit the entire peninsula. After considering the matter for several weeks, the council decided against the appropriation, giving as the reason the many expenditures currently necessary in Carmel.

DOLLARS & SENSE

By Anthony Piazza & Marshall Bloom

The Missing IRA Caper (Conclusion)

Chapter III. The office. Five years later.

"GOOD MORNING! This is Bloom & Piazza, Investment Detectives. It's one week from IRA deadline in the fifth year of tax reform, 1992. Marshall Bloom speaking. What can I do to assist you in solving the mysteries of your financial life?"

The female voice at the other end of the phone gulped hard, "Did you say you're an investment detective?"

"That's correct."

"Does that mean you can't help me figure out who murdered my lover's brother's butler?"

"No. But I can help you solve the mystery of where your retirement program went if you or your employer didn't take charge of your own financial destiny five years ago when Tax Reform took place."

"What about my lover's brother's butler?"

"Did he have an IRA?"

The line went dead.

•

THE MIST swirled against the window panes. It was that famous stuff, the Carmel Fog, arriving early this year, oozing up from the beach and slithering past the cottages and the twisted cypress trees.

Suddenly the phone rang. It had been ringing all morning.

"Hello," and anguished voice began, "are you the investment guys, Boom & Pizza?"

"Almost. Try Bloom & Piazza. This is Anthony Piazza speaking. Can I help you?"

"Yes. I want you to tell me why some guys I know have big pots of dough growing tax-deferred till they retire and I don't."

"Do you have an IRA?"

"No, I can't do one. My wife and I have been excluded for five years since 1987, because we earn more than $50,000 and she's covered by a retirement plan at work."

"Did you ask your boss if he was going to install a retirement plan for you five years ago in 1987 when Tax Reform began? The administrative costs back then were minimal and he was not required to put in a penny to match your contributions if he had selected the right plan."

"What?"

"Did you hear what I said?"

"I think you said that I've wasted five years with a boss who didn't understand tax reform."

"I didn't say that."

"No, the Tax Reform Act must have said that."

"Have you ever thought of being an investment detective?"

•

"Hello, Marshall Bloom speaking."

"This is Mr. Happy Rest."

"How's the nation-wide chain of Chinese restaurants doing? How well Piazza and I remember the opening of your first restaurant in downtown Carmel five years ago when we at Kung Pao Chicken and ..."

"... and you told me that a retirement plan for my employees was profitable, wise and super patriotic. Take charge, Yankee-style!"

"And now you have a Carmel-based chain of Happy Rest Food Stops all over the country."

"They call me the Cantonese Ray Kroc."

"And all because you allowed us to install a retirement plan for you and your employees, invest the money in conservative growth and income funds, and generally spread a glow of satisfaction throughout the rank and file."

"Bloom."

"Yes, Mr. Happy Rest."

"I've succeeded because I worked my buns off, Yankee-style."

"And the retirement plan?"

"It definitely didn't hurt."

Although Pacific Grove was founded as a methodist retreat, the first church building was for an Episcopalian congregation, St. Mary's-by-the-Sea. It had such a pleasing design that when the time came to enlarge it, rather than add onto it awkwardly the decision was made to cut it in half across the middle move the two halves apart and elongate the building.

World spotlight on Oscar night

WHAT WEIGHS 8½ pounds and is 13½ inches high? Right. The shiny gold coveted Oscar.

Trophies and awards are an American ritual of recognition and prior to this year 1,729 Oscars have been awarded. The original design was sketched on a tablecloth in 1927 by Cedric Gibbons, then George Stanley transformed the sketch of a knight holding a crusader's sword standing on a reel of film into the statuette. The reels represent the five original branches of the academy; actors, directors, producers, technicians and writers. This night-of-nights emphasized the importance of writers. Whether this was intentional or just happened, I don't know.

The Oscar telecast takes about 30 hours to make and no one will reveal how much it costs to produce. The stock answer is, "They are worth a million dollars to the people who receive them."

We knew the moment we entered the grandeur of the skylighted, plant-filled lobby of the Sheraton Grande Hotel that we had made the right choice for our stay to cover the Academy Awards ceremony.

This ideal location allowed us to walk the few blocks to the grandest celebration in moviedom instead of inching along by limo. We made our entrance to the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion via the red carpet just behind Matthew Broderick and Barbara Walters, who was clinging to her hubby's hand. Army Archerd (veteran star-greeter and Daily Variety columnist), was at his elevated post with mike in hand. Entertainment Tonight's Mary Hart and John Tesh held a spot along the way as did Patty Duke and Steve Edwards.

It was awesome to realize that the telecast of the 59th annual Academy Awards Presentation was beamed more than 300 million homes around the world. From Bolivia to Burma and Yemen to Zimbabwe.

Sundrenched fans (in record breaking 80-degree weather) were rewarded with suntans for their bodies and star glimpses for their eyes. All seemed relatively calm and orderly despite the fact the fans had waited more the 36 hours to show signs saying "Children of a Lesser God," "Oral Roberts For Outstanding Portrayal as a Man of God," and to display fatigues worn to visually voice their preference for Platoon. Below the bleachers there were 650 photographers in a space meant for 400.

On cue, earthly stars arrived. They were dressed in everything from tacky to terrific. New black lace, old beige lace, see-right-through-black-net-skirts, designer gowns, strapless dresses, black Paris puffs, and a few furs. Kathleen Turner, striving for the glamorous image the stars-of-yesteryear projected, was in a sedate dress — in front at least, — after being told "do not dress wildly." She arched her back to show off the low cut of the back. Other crowd-pleasers were Tom Hanks, Rodney Dangerfield, Chevy Chase, Tony Bennett, Steven Speilberg, Oprah Winfrey, Michael Douglas and Shirley MacLaine, who arrived by limo — not in a flying saucer as she did onstage. Leonard Nimoy (sans beard) was in a brighter frame of mind than when he attended the Star Trek IV premiere in Monterey.

Elizabeth Taylor, Dustin Hoffman and Lauren Bacall chose to sneak in the back entrance rather than tread the red carpet. I can understand Liz's fear having seen her mobbed and mauled in New York. I doubt if the other two would incite such a reaction. In any case, there seemed to be more security enforcers (obviously enjoying their gig) than guests, fans and press added together.

Here are some impressions!

MOST STUNNED & SURPRISED: Marlee Matlin. We encountered her in the ladies lounge and spoke with her. (She reads lips). She is tiny, delightful, very un-Hollywood, and wore a pretty lilac lace gown. At 21 she is only the fourth to win with a first screen performance. As you may know, she and co-star William Hurt developed a real-life romance during the filming. Marlee appeared in Children in Chicago, was seen by a casting agent — thus, the film and Oscar. She lost her hearing at 18 months due to roseola. Her next movie Walker is set in the 1850s. She plays a deaf character but has a script with a speaking role.

THE MOST THRILLED: Lee Grant for the Docu-feature she directed — Down and Out in America, saying that 10,000 children die every year of poverty and that four days worth of military spending would wipe out poverty in the world." This feature tied with Brigitte Berman's Artie Shaw: Time Is All You've Got. She said, "I found so many lives inside this one man." She is going to the USSR in Septembmer and her ambition there is to interview Mikhail Gorbachev.

MOST RENEWED LOOKING STAR: Lauren Bacall. She looks wonderful. She's had a face-lift since we last saw her up close at an opeing night in New York. Ms. Bacall's throaty voice oozed, "I don't plan to do another Broadway musical but I am interested in doing a movie."

MOST NERVOUS: Piper Laurie.

THE HAPPIEST WINNER: Producer of Platoon Arnold Kopelson.

MOST CHARISMATIC STAR: Paul "Crocodile Dundee" Hogan. Crocodile is the biggest grosser in Australia by three times over the second-place grosser E.T. He will do a second Crocodile.

MOST GRACIOUS RECIPIENT: Steven Spielberg. He heaped on praise for writers saying, "Movies are the literature of my life. I have spent most of my life in the dark — watching movies." (He started making movies as a child and has never stopped). He sees films thorugh the little boy in himself, through his adult eyes, and through his son's eyes.

MOST SCRUMPTIOUS LOOKING: a slimmed-down Oprah Winfrey, who is stilled asked, "Do you make 30 million dollars a year?" Her answer, "No way."

MOST FLUSTERED: Dianne Wiest, who started off by saying, "I completely forgot to thank Woody on stage." (Did she, really?)

MOST INDOMITABLE: Bette Davis, who said, "The secret of my success was to learn the lines and pray to God." Then admitted she had lifted that from Claude Raines.

THE MOST OVERJOYED: Herbie Hancock (best musical score) said, "Jazz is the greatest of all expression of the creative spirit of mankind."

MOST SKEPTICAL: Oliver Stone who said, "I could not believe the pre-Oscar predictions that Platoon would win. I kept remembering the Dewey-Truman election of '48." His next movie is Wall Street about the tensions of the financial community.

MOMENTS THAT MATCHED THE NIGHT: The spectacular Art Deco setting, the fast-moving opening number, Chevy Chase, Bernadette Peters, the Bugs Bunny/Tom Hanks trickery, Steven Spielberg's acceptance speech, Shirley MacLaine's arriving in a flying saucer — all seemed to rekindle the spark of The Golden Era.

Another great moment was Marlee Matlin's acceptance speech in sign language for a film giving movie buffs an inside look at someone's fears, angers, and dreams. She said later, "Although I couldn't hear my name, I knew I had won because Bill just look at me and smiled."

Next to us were two Los Angeles Times correspondents, nearby sat Roger Ebert, who said, "Oh, you are from Carmel. I went there to interview your mayor. Clint is a very nice man." (That's no news to us.) Across was Rona Barrett in a red and white short dress saying in her wispy voice, "I am not going to act any more, I will leave that to the pros in the future."

featured at the Governor's Ball due to their continued support of the arts.

Speaker Willie Brown was strutting around in an expensive tux. Dean Jagger ('49 winner) looking very frail and such crowd-pleasers as Tony Quinn, Dom DeLouise, Christopher "Superman" Reeve, Red Buttons ('57) George Kennedy ('67), Rita Moreno ('61), Haing S Ngor ('84) and Jeff Bridges.

The Governor's Ball was wonderful but is losing some of its steam. The party to attend this year — before, during or (certainly) after the awards was Thelazar bash at Spago's. Irving (Swifty) and Mary (filmmaker) Lazar invited 200 close pals to their Oscar-watching party. Those who chose Spago's over the ball were Elizabeth Taylor, George Hamilton, Shirley MacLaine, Frank Price (MCA-Universal group), Joan Collins, Whoopi Goldberg. The paparazzi had a field day and owner chef Wolfgang Puck lost his herb garden under their trampling feet.

The Platoon party came in second with hooting, cheering and back-slapping in La Scala, six blocks from the Hilton. Top bigwigs made a token appearance at the ball before joining their Platoon buddies.

One can forgive the flubs and off-stage noises when moviedom heralds those who make movie make-believe such a strong influence in the cultural fabric of our country and around the world.

We are keenly aware that we are no substitute for His Honor Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood, we did our best to carry on for his hometown newspaper on Oscar night while he stayed home to run the city.

DEL MONTE REVISITED RECEPTION

La Mirada was the setting for a reception honoring the Advisory Committee of Del Monte Revisited. This was the initial thrust (one of several more planned) for the celebration of the 80th Anniversary of the opening of the art gallery at the old Hotel Del Monte — which launched the Monterey Peninsula as an art center.

It was an afternoon of shared memories. Committee chairman Frederick Stanley grew up at the hotel during the time it was managed by his father, Carlos Sheldon Stanley.

This is only the beginning. Next on the agenda is a special exhibit of selected works from the original Del Monte Art Gallery of 1907 which opens to the public in the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art April 11. This leads up to the climatic celebration gala: "An Edwardian Ball" to be held in the old Hotel Del Monte (now the home of the Naval Postgraduate School) on May 2.

Among committee members attending were Ted and Dana Calhoon (who chaired all the festivities), Capt. Dempsey and Jane Butler, Richard and Patty La Salle, Pauline Stanley, Hal and Gail Compton, Sudy Macdonald, Cmdr. Allen Sherwood, Mrs. Thomas McGlynn, Kent Seavey, and Rear Adm. and Mrs. Robert C. Austin.

REAL ESTATE TODAY

Pricing Your Home

By Jayde Thompson

Setting a fair price is a crucial first step in putting your home on the market, and it begins with a professional market analysis of the property. You might start by looking around the neighborhood at other houses for sale. Then contact a Realtor familiar with your area to get information about the asking prices of these homes and the length of time each one has been on the market. Your Realtor will also be able to provide you with information from official records about the actual sale prices of homes similar to your own, as well as the features of each property that might have affected its value, such as the number of rooms, the overall condition, and the extras — family rooms, finished basements, garages, or wall-to-wall carpeting. By putting all of this information together, you can establish a market value for your home, or a price range in which it is likely to sell. If you set your price too high, it could take months, even years to sell your home. But if it's priced within about five percent of the established market value, your house should sell fairly quickly.

To arrange for a free professional market analysis of your home, call me, Jayde Thompson, your Carmel specialist at Real Estate By The Sea at 624-1444 or stop by my office at San Carlos and Seventh.

M'LADY BRUHN FASHIONS FOR CARMEL WOMAN'S CLUB

After a luncheon chaired by Yvonne Simms, the members and guests of the Carmel Woman's Club were treated to the latest in fashion from M'Lady Bruhn of Carmel. This was a benefit for Meals on Wheels and they raised about $850.

Club members modeled while commentator Karen Frudden, kept the fashions flowing in and out. Manager of the show was Robin Schott.

GUESTLIFE/SHERATON HOST WINE AWARDS GALA

For the fourth year in a row GuestLife hosted the Monterey County Food and Wine Tasting Awards Gala. This time, the co-sponsor was the Monterey Sheraton and all proceeds (over $10,000) will go to Meals on Wheels so that those who are homebound can enjoy nutritious meals daily in their own homes.

Tables with wines and cuisine were arranged for an easy flow from the mezzanine to the ballroom at the Sheraton. Decorations were floor-to-ceiling balloons slowing turning like giant grape clusters (courtesy of Balloons-By-The-Sea).

Wines are combined to complement cuisine from contributing restaurants. There was good-hearted competitiveness between chefs and the 750 guests were delighted. Gone are the days when a platter of cheese and fruit is set out with wine. Now, you are likely to find: smoked prawns, veal ravioli with wild mushroom creme sauce, smoked duck chutney on orange cornbread croutons, Lobster Morgan and fancy fruit tarts.

Goodhue received the Robert Stanton FAIA Award from the Monterey Bay Chapter in 1985 for "outstanding contributions to the architecture of Central California."

The HGHB firm has received local, state and national recognition with 26 design awards. On the peninsula, these include the High Meadow Outlook Condominiums, the recent York School buildings, the Monterey Peninsula Dental Group Complex and two condominium groupings at Carmel Valley Golf Club where the firm also designed the Quail Lodge and Clubhouse. OBITUARIES

Dorothy H. Crispo

A memorial Mass was celebrated Mar. 10 at the Carmelite Monastery for Dorothy Hummel Crispo of Carmel, who died Mar. 8 at her home. She was 68.

Born May 2, 1918 in Chicago, she was the daughter of the late Lone Star Cement president and board chairman R.A. Hummel, whose family founded the Kosta Glass firm of Sweden.

She was educated in convents in Latin America and Europe. As a young woman she worked for more than 10 years as assistant to the chairman of the board of Intercontinental Hotels. She held the Cuban franchise for Slenderella weight-reduction salons until Fidel Castro seized power and closed her operations.

In New York, she wrote comedy for entertainers like Phyllis Diller, Joan Rivers and Alan King, among others.

She also wrote a syndicated newspaper advice column called, "Tell me, Dorothy," and was the author of several books. In addition, she was a reader for the Doubleday publishing company.

In 1971, she moved to the peninsula, where she served as a Spanish-language interpreter for courts in Monterey and Salinas, and for the Carmel Police Department. She has also translated in doctor's offices and at Community Hospital for non-English-speaking patients.

She was a senior fellow at the Monterey Institute for International Studies and a member of the Wine and Food Society and the Commodore Sloat Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She is listed in Foremost Women in Communication.

Survivors include her husband, Paul; a daughter, Valerie Ramsey of Greenwich, Conn., and six grandchildren.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, P.O. Box 223139, Carmel 93922.

Albert L. Kotzebue

A memorial service, with full military honors, took place Mar. 24 at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea, for retired Lt. Col. Albert L. Kotzebue of Colfax, formerly of Carmel, who died Mar. 19 at Travis Air Force Base. He was 63.

Born Oct. 10, 1923 in San Juan, Puerto Rico, he was a member of the first graduating class at Carmel High School in 1941.

In 1945, as a lieutenant, he made history as the first American to make contact with the Russian Army in the linkup of the two Allied armies that signaled the end of World War II. Newspapers around the world carried pictures of him embracing a Soviet army lieutenant at a village on the Elbe River.

Forty years later, in 1985, Col. Kotzebue and the Soviet soldier, who had risen to the rank of general, met again at the same location and drank a toast in a special ceremony.

After serving in Korea and Vietnam, he retired from the service in 1967 after 28 years. He then returned to Vietnam to work for six years with the Agency for International Development as a province adviser.

In recent years, he attended law school in Sacramento, earning his degree earlier this month.

Survivors include his wife, Goldie; four daughters, Sandra Miller of Long Island, Mary Kay Hopkins of Ann Arbor, Mich., Patricia Benham of Lake Placid, N.Y., and Deborah Kelly of Pacific Grove; a son, David of Grand Rapids, Mich.; his step-mother, Isabel Kotzebue of Pebble Beach; and 20 grandchildren.

Born Aug. 11, 1896 in Oxford, Iowa, he lived in Carmel for 41 years.

He was a teaching golf pro at the Naval Postgraduate School course and later was a playground supervisor for the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District. He retired from the school district in 1972.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Visiting Nurse Association.

Born Aug. 31, 1912 in New York City, she lived in Carmel from 1947 to 1962, when she moved to San Francisco after the death of her husband, John.

She has no known surviving relatives.

According to her wishes, no services took place. Inurnment took place in El Carmel Cemetery in Pacific Grove. Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Ann Moss Wortham

Memorial services took place for Ann Moss Wortham of Pebble Beach, a dietician and member of the American Dietetic Association, who died March 25 in Carmel Valley. She was 66.

Born April 6, 1920 in Ward, Ala., she was raised in Columbus, Miss. and graduated with a home economics degree from Mississippi State College for Women. She moved to the peninsula 14 years ago.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

During the first 30 years of the 21st Century, senior citizens will probably control many of the nation's political and social institutions, according to research conducted by Dr. Frederick R. Eisele of Penn State. "The baby boom of 1946 to 1957, coupled with the reduced birth rate of the 1970s, will create a 'geriatric echo' beginning about the year 2005 and lasting to around 2030," writes Dr. Eisele. This, he says, will bring about "gerontocratic situations," a modern form of rule by elders.

Children may call 'bunny line' for messages

From now until May 1, youngsters can "cotton" to tales told by Harry the Easter Bunny.

Every day, children in the 408 area code can dial the TELELINE "bunnyline" at 976-2233 and hear a new, two-minute entertaining and educational story straight from the Bunny's whiskered lips.

TELELINE, INC. and Harry the Easter Bunny will donate a portion of each telephone call to California Special Olympics and Special Olympics International. These funds help provide opportunities for mentally retarded athletes to participate in sports competitions throughout California and also at the July 1987 International Summer Olympic games in South Bend, Ind.

One ear up and one ear down, hippity-hopping down the Easter trail, Mr. Bunny weaves wondrous stories with important messages for young callers that help them to understand the joys of preserving, helping others, honesty, safety and friendship.

By calling 976-2233, children can learn what Special Olympics athletes learn when they become part of the international sports program for the mentally retarded.

Songwriter and lyricist Carol Conners, Oscar-nominee for Gonna Fly Now (co-written with Bill Conti) for the film Rocky, authored the 75 fun-filled fables for the "bunnyline."

Charges for dailing 976-2233 in the 408 area code is $2, plus toll, if any.

Children are requested to obtain parental consent before calling Harry the Easter Bunny.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Listening is a virtue

Rotary, Carmel-by-the-Sea
March 31, 1982

Oliver Wendell Holmes, Sr., the 19th century physician and humorist of Cambridge, Mass., wrote in his book The Poet at the Breakfast Table, "It is the province to knowledge to speak, it is the privilege of wisdom to listen."

I often wonder how many married couples have the wisdom to listen to each other? Counting the ones I know who do, I have not run out of fingers on my right hand. I know couples who have been carrying on disparate conversations and one-way dialogues for 25 years. I meet the perpetual interrupters and they imply that what their partner says is of no importance. I know the spouse who is ready to do battle against any statement; one sentence and it becomes a "who will win situation." No one wins and there is never a sign of disarmament either bilateral or unilateral.

Sarcasm, condemnation, quick judgements, perpetual confrontations can wreck the peace of a marriage as quickly as turning off the hearing aid can put it in a deep freeze.

Listening to a spouse is an obvious priority or is it obvious to anyone else but to me?

So endeth Farrell's advice to the lovelorn, the married ones, that is.

Oh Lord, be pleased to give married couples the wisdom to shut up and to listen to each other at least once a year. Amen.

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

By Henrietta Stern

Decisions, decisions

UNLESS YOU'VE been residing in a cave somewhere, you are undoubtedly aware that a New San Clemente Dam is proposed on the Carmel River. And if you follow this column regularly, you probably know a fair amount about this project. But a water supply project entails much more than a dam, reservoir, spillway or other facilities; it also concerns how the entire water supply will be managed, how decisions about rationing will be made, and how fish populations will be maintained.

The purpose of today's column is to discuss these issues, just as the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board must do at its April 14 workshop (7:30 p.m., Seaside City Council Chambers). Their decisions will be encoded into the computer model, and in turn, be used to define the best reservoir size that meets municipal, drought reserve and environmental needs. A second workshop will be held on April 30 (same place and time) to formally define the project as well as the "no project." I'll cover those topics in a future column.

Let's pause briefly to review some water supply facts. Many people erroneously believe our water comes directly from the dam. Actually about 65 percent of our water comes from ground water, mainly from the Carmel Valley aquifer (a smaller proportion comes from Seaside). Water is released from San Clemente Dam, flows downstream to irrigate streamside vegetation and provide fish habitat, percolates into the aquifer, and is pumped by municipal wells. This multiple use of surface and ground-water resources is called "conjunctive use."

The first issue at hand is whether to continue this conjunctive use policy. As the benefits and necessity of conjunctive use are clear, this is an easy decision. Sure thing! Next, the board will hear a little bad news. Based on very recent studies, there isn't as much water storage or safe yield in the coastal Seaside basin as we had previously assumed. That means we must rely less on this resource in the future. District technical staff will present their findings and suggest a revised management scheme for the new dam--when, where and how much water should be drawn from each source to safely meet demand.

Another important topic is rationing. In a series of critically dry years, rationing could be necessary even with a new dam. Remember, even the biggest reservoir can't provide water if there's no rain to fill it! The good news is that the number, intensity and duration of rationing events would be much less with proposed dam than with existing facilities.

How would you manage water supplies in the middle of a drought with no means to predict future rainfall? Minimize rationing and hope for the best? Or ration early in the season to store more water for subsequent months? The board must wrestle with these same questions. District staff will present alternative rationing scenarios for consideration, and the board will select one scheme it feels best serves the public.

•

A THIRD important management topic concerns maintaining a "wild run" of steelhead trout. No, I don't mean frenzied fishes crazily swimming amok; a wild run refers to no human alteration of the steelhead population's reproduction and gene pool.

A few fish facts...steelhead, like salmon, migrate to the ocean as young "smolts" in spring and return to their freshwater birthplace to spawn as adults several winters later. It turns out the river habitat above San Clemente Dam is excellent for spawning. However, the eager spawners must first get over the proposed 300-foot-high dam -- an awfully big structure if you're a two-foot fish! Thus a trap and truck program is planned to safely chauffeur spawners over the dam in style.

How about the youngsters that must migrate downstream? In normal or wet years, these fish easily pass over the dam spillway along with the cascading water. The tricky part is how to safely pass downstream migrants over the big dam in dry years with minimal or no spill (fish, unlike birds, do not enjoy 300-foot swan dives!).

Do we build complex and expensive mechanical fish passage facilities to move fish downstream in dry years? Or do we build a hatchery at the base of the dam to carefully spawn and rear fish for release the following year? Economically, the less expensive hatchery seems like the logical choice. However, even the best managed hatchery will alter the population's gene pool in some way. Not necessarily a deleterious or even noticeable change, but a change nonetheless.

Board members will hear presentations by our fishery and engineering consultants regarding the pros and cons of various downstream passage facilities versus the hatchery concept. Representatives from the State Department of Fish and Game will also present their views. Based on this testimony, the board will determine whether or not to add a new "dam plus hatchery" alternative for analysis in the EIR/EIS.

Remember, these management decisions can affect your lifestyle and your pocketbook in the future. Come to the April 14 workshop and become involved in the planning process. Public comment and questions are welcome!

CARMEL VOICE

By Sam Salerno

Strictly gourmet

THAT'S HOW the Meals On Wheels wine and food tasting was described by those attending the Monterey Sheraton this past week. The day before the gala affair, a few of the "lucky" reporters sampled some gourmet food from Executive Chef Heinz Guggisberg of the Sheraton.

We sat at a round table and sampled tomato and ginger soup, sauteed calamari in a cream sauce, sliced sweet breads dipped in a beer batter served with fresh horseradish, petite roulade de veau, braised rabbit, polenta, spinach fusilli, and saboyon. Seated at the round table were Maureen Moriarty, director of PR at the Sheraton; Bob Mikelitch, director of catering; Joe Tarantino, writer and wine connoisseur; Sharon Bates, Artie Early, Susie Sylvia, Chuck Scardina, and Neil Gardner. Chef Heinz should be complimented for the wonderful cuisine at the Sheraton!

CLASSIC WORD ABOUT CLASSIC CLUBS

There's a new shop in the Mall on San Carlos Street which is the "right" spot if you're into classic golf clubs or golf paraphernalia. Jonathan McClean (no relation to former touring pro Dick McClean of Carmel) makes it all happen. He has everything from a Tommy Armour putter, a Tony Penna driver, a Jack Nicklaus driver, to classic wedges, and full sets of irons...that is, Spalding and MacGregor irons. McClean comes to Carmel from the Bay Area. We wish him well in his new adventure.

NEW CHEF AT CARMEL VALLEY RANCH

Peter D'Andrea, who is a friend of Glenn Hammer, is the new chef at Carmel Valley Ranch. He's now working at the Ranch restaurant and will handle chef chores when the Ranch Hotel opens soon. Good luck, Peter.

HOLE IN ONE

Kit Huston, employed by the Golf Division of Stefan Petroff Industries in Pacific Grove, pulled what his mom, Mrs. Clive Rayne, thought was an April Fool's gag, but it wasn't. He called to tell her (on April 1st) that he had made his first hole-in-one on the 7th hole at Carmel Valley Ranch (Petroff was a witness). Kit will try his hand in the next California Amateur Tournament. His brothers, sisters, mom, and friends will be rooting for him to make a good showing.

MAN'S BEST FRIEND

Judy McCarthy of Suds 'N' Scissors reminds us that the Del Monte Kennel Club will hold its 65th All-Breed Dog Show and Obedience Trial, Saturday, May 9, at the Lodge at Pebble Beach. It'll take place on the lawn at the Lodge starting at 8 in the a.m. A portion of the proceeds of the show will be donated to the Ventana Wilderness Society. Entry is limited to 500 dogs. The six divisions in the all-breed show include: Sporting, working, Terriers, Toys, Hounds, and Non-Sporting. If you're into the unusual in canines, jot this one down on your "things to do" calendar.

THEY'D TURN OVER IN THEIR GRAVES

I wonder what our "founding fathers" would think if they knew what was happening with TV's "electronic preachers." They are making a shambles out of religion. The most important thing we are learning about religion on television is that it is big business! Rest assured that TV preachers will suffer in the collection plate and in the future, Uncle Sam will investigate their "tax-free" status. Thank God for the pioneers who were honest and sincere about their religious persuasion!

HEY, YOU FORGOT YOUR WINNINGS.

Jim Grover and Sean Faeth who came up from Los Angeles to play in the Don's Invitational at Rancho won second place in the Sunday portion of the show but left town too soon. They had their lunch and libations on the final day and headed home before they were announced as second-place winners for the low nine-hole score. Overall winners were Dr. Brad Carl and this reporter. If Brad decides to give up dentistry, he came make it on the PGA tour. He's that good.

See you next week!

HAPPY HOOKERS BALL

Bud Allen's Second Annual Hookers Ball on April 1 was a hit again this year. Originator and casting director, Bud Allen, gets credit for one of the most original social bashes to hit the social scene. He has found the secret for "the regal horde" out for a social flit.

The Mission Ranch Barn bulged with people who felt liberated enough to dazzle themselves and others, too, if they could. There was a sense of freedom and gregariousness in those who traipsed over. Arrant nonsense prevailed with "la dolce vita" and a mock hedonistic style of living. Many wore ersatz hooker dresses, stiletto high heels, tarted up costumes and wigs. Costumes, like masks, make people act a little screwball, as though they are not responsible for their actions. It's all in fun, jest for the heck of it and the money goes to improve student education for the kiddies of the Carmel School District.

Mayor Clint Eastwood warmed all hooker hearts when he said, "I had so much fun last year that I bought the place."

Door prize of a fur coat was won by handsome Russ Harris. (Russ, what does a gal have to do to borrow it when you aren't wearing it?) Bud Allen donated a gold nugget necklace for the grand prize costume winner. It went to Lady Godiva and her horse (Patty Cox). Victor Ruth from Australia, here visiting with the Jim Yates, received his very own "America's Cup" to take back Down Under. "The Carmel Beach Walkway Award" was presented to Elinor Laiolo. (She was the only council member to vote against the walkway.)

Winner of the "Captain Hook Award" was Dave Banks; "The Flasher Award" to T. Scott Moore; the "Tootsie Award" to Merv Sutton; and the "Hook, Line & Sinker Award" to Chuck Bourquin and Kurt Spradley won the "John Award."

Best-dressed hooker award ribbon went to Regina Lauterback (Teddy Award); Linda Steward (Mae West Award); Chris Durney Armanasco (Miss Scenic Drive and Rockette Award); and Joan McInicnh (Up Front Award). Need we explain that? No. Figure it out yourselves.

TASTY TREATS FROM TRIESTE

Everyone knows the Trattorias of Italy feature the best Italian cuisine and for those who cannot jet over to Italy the Monterey Plaza, (following a tradition of quality and unusual ideas), has brought Italy to Monterey.

Antica Trattoria Suban, one of Italy's finest historic restaurants, has been feeding Trieste citizens and tourists for 122 years (surviving two world wars.) Mario and Claudia Suban, fourth generation owners, have maintained the rustic homey character and quality of food known for its Slavic influence. With Trieste only 10 minutes from the Yugoslavian border Eastern influences are found in their food preparation.

April 7 to 9 Ristorante Delfino, at the Plaza, is host for the Suban's first visit to the U.S. The six-course dinner on Tuesday was superb! We can personally vouch for that-from zuppa to caffe with all the appropriate delicious Italian wines. What a feast!

For a treat seldom available outside the Italian borders, try to book for one of the two seating tonight, the 9th. Call 646-1700, and enjoy!

Kim Weston cultivates unique photo legacy

By ANNE PAPINEAU

IT'S A Carmel spring, an artist's dream. The grass is still green, the lupin are blooming and the swallows would build nests at the mission, if they were allowed to.

In a studio not far from Carmel Bay, Kim Weston turns his back on the sea to build his own version of it. Rather than set up his tripod on the edge of the shore, Weston hauls a truck-load of sand to his converted garage. He paints a bright blue sky and dots his home-made beach with lobster-red cardboard crabs. Then he takes his vintage Linhoff 4-by-5 camera, a gift from Uncle Brett, and photographs the colorful scene in black and white.

Kim Weston marks the third generation in his family to find expression through the lens of a camera. But his work seems light years removed from the unmanipulated "straight" photographic style pioneered by his grandfather, Edward Weston.

"I didn't do it as a conscious effort, but my work is quite different from what my grandfather, uncle or father did," he explained.

While Edward, Cole and Brett Weston celebrate natural forms on film, Kim constructs an artificial world before committing its image to paper.

Dı ring a stay in New York, he didn't take a single picture.

"Instead I recreated what I saw in New York on my walls. I had total control over my feelings. I love to travel. I travel a lot. It's much easier for me to recreate the feelings I have. If you don't have control, you end up finger painting."

Carmel-born, Weston claims to have been "working at photography" since the age of 9. His father, Cole Weston, schooled him in the basics of photography as a youth. "Instead of a fire engine to play with, I had a camera," he recalled.

Kim Weston retains a child's memory of his grandfather, Edward, who died New Year's Day, 1958. Edward Weston was co-founder, with Imogen Cunningham, Ansel Adams, Sonya Noskowiak and Willard Van Dyke, of the f/64 photographic group. His modest home in Carmel Highlands was a mecca for fine art photographers in the '40s and '50s.

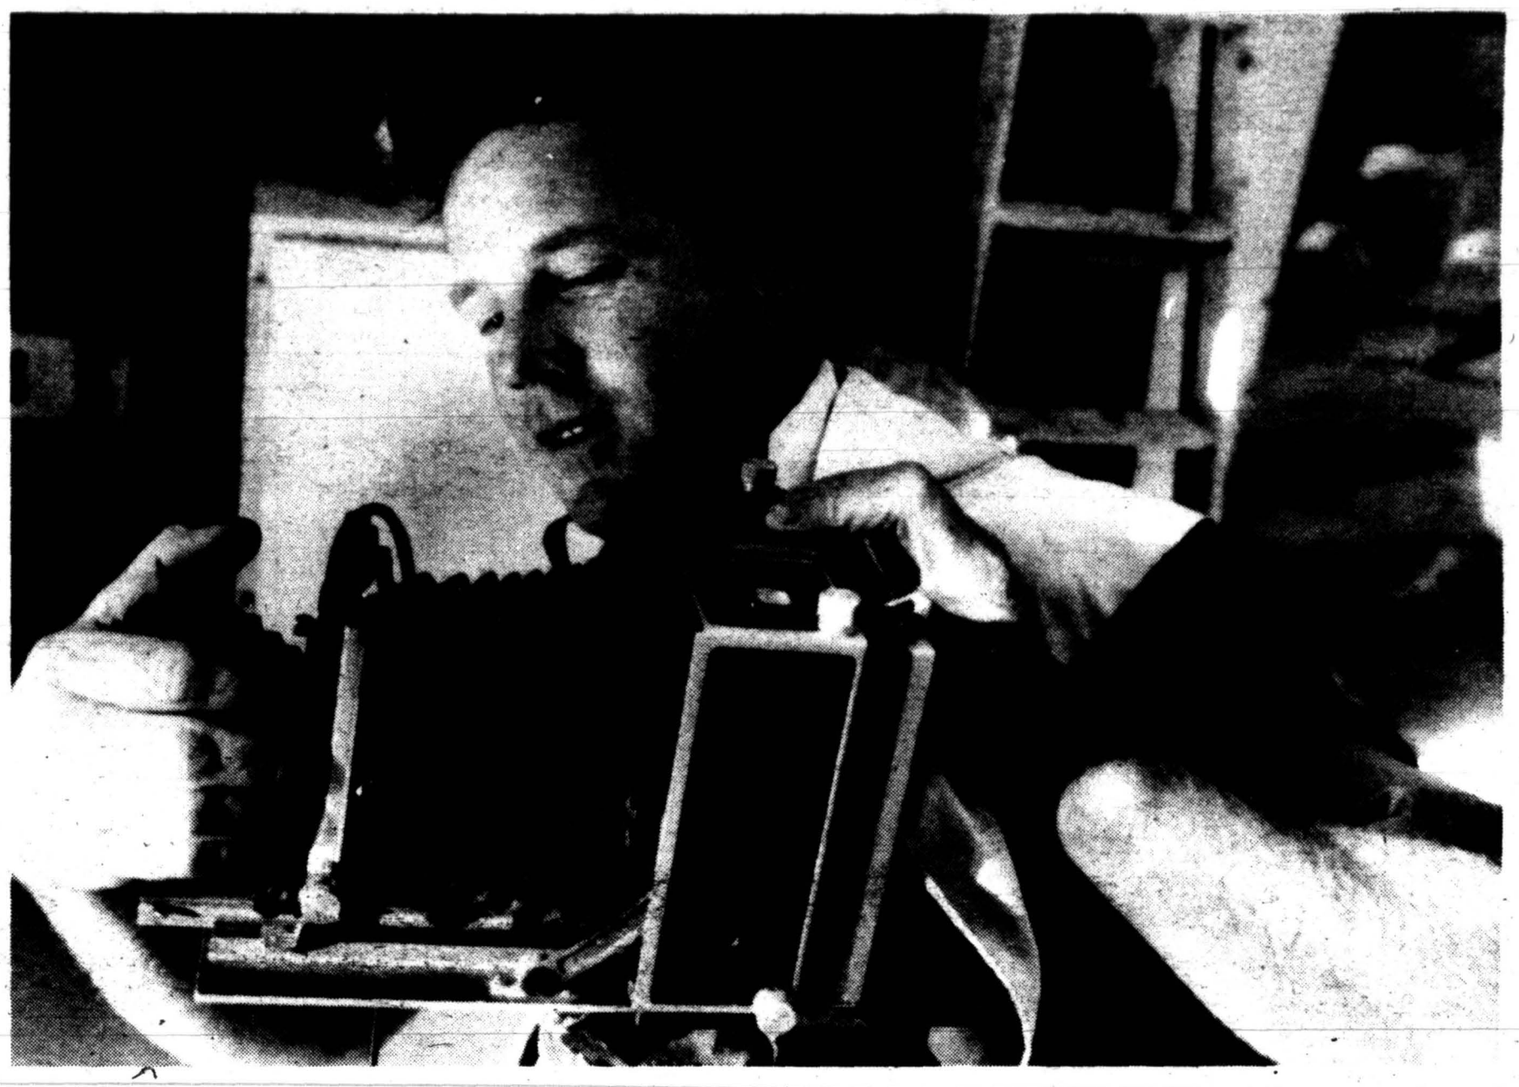
"I remember meeting my grandfather once. I must have been 5. I remember he served us cottage cheese, avocado and olive oil. He had Parkinson's Disease and was quite frail then," Kim Weston said.

Weston learned his craft from his father and uncle. But his art is his own. Part of the evolution of his individual style has required the rejection of some of the principles he grew up with.

Most photographers, for example, will fine tune an image by continually reprinting it. In the bullish market of fine art photographs, certain legendary images command six-figure prices. Among these are the "Pepper No. 30" prints made by Edward Weston.

For his first one-man show, Kim Weston has produced one-of-a-kind photographs. The collection, exhibited at the Weston Gallery in Carmel, features a surrealistic gathering of prints. The photographs sell for approximately $400. As a never-say-reprint precaution, Weston has affixed the negative to the back of each work.

"To me any type of expression should be sort of like climing up a ladder," he explained. "Reprinting is like walking back down that ladder. When a photograph comes to the printing stage, I'm pretty much through with it. I do one-of-a-kind images. Dad's going to kill me, but I don't like the reprinting aspect of photography. For me personally, I could photograph every single day and maybe never return to the same image."



KIM WESTON marks the third-generation of professional photographers in the Weston family. He uses a Linhoff four-by-five camera given to him by his uncle, Brett Weston. Kim Weston rejects natural settings for his images, preferring the control he can achieve with painted backgrounds. (Holly McFarland photograph).

"I used to photograph rocks and weeds and seaweed," he quipped. "But I have a lot more control inside."

•

WESTON'S SELF-MADE world is littered with props. Besides the necessary camera, his studio is populated by a time-worn Winnie the Pooh, a faux cityscape and a chicken face mask. In the corner a toilet is the focus of a milk carton constellation that collides with ankle-deep cutout cows.

A tabby named Pusser has free run of the place.

"My grandfather had a tremendous amount of cats. I generally loathe cats," Weston said.

ARTS & LEISURE

"Most photographers don't interest me," Weston asserted. His photographs require a lot of set painting before any film is USUALLY FOUND behind the camera, Carmel's Kim Weston steps into one of the settings he constructed for a photo series — "Milk Wars." (Holly McFarland photograph).

THE SURREALISTIC photographs by Kim Weston begin with a sketch, which he then transforms into life-size paintings in his Carmel studio. Female figures are juxtaposed against the painted settings that range from austere to complex. The photographer's first one-man show is currently displayed at the Weston Gallery in Carmel.

Chamber society presents Cantilena Piano Quartet

THE CANTILENA PIANO Quartet will perform at Sunset Theater in Carmel on Friday, April 10. The 8 p.m. concert is sponsored by the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula.

The quartet with Frank Glazer, piano; Edna Michell, violin; Philipp Naegele, viola, and Paul Olefsky, cello, will play Mahler's Piano Quartet in One Movement; Faure's Piano Quartet No. 1 in C. Minor, Opus 15; and Dvorak's Piano Quartet in E flat Major, Opus 87.

The Cantilena Piano Quartet is now in its second decade, having been founded in 1972. It is dedicated both to encouraging new works and to digging out and presenting long-forgotten piano quartets. American and European composers have dedicated more than 20 works to the ensemble. The quartet has been acclaimed on the concert stage, on records and on television.

The 1986/87 concert season opened with a tour of major European cities beginning with the Belgrade and Zagreb international festivals and ending at the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest and Tel Aviv. In Copenhagen the Cantilena gave the world premiere of a new piano quartet by Danish composer Herman Koppel which was broadcast live throughout Scandinavia. New recordings for the Arabesque label of the complete piano quartets of Johannes Brahms were released in 1986. The quartet also recorded for Pro-Arte Records.

Edna Michell, violin, is the founder of the Cantilena Piano Quartet. She mastered the fundamentals of the violin before the age of 5 and played in public at 9. Amongst her teachers and coaches were Max Rostal, Yehudi Menuhin, Zino Francescatti, Henryk Szeryng and Ivan Galamian. Michell has appeared as solist and chamber musician throughout the United States, Europe, Latin America and in her native Israel. She is artistic director of the Helena Rubinstein Concerts, was artist-in-residence at Purchase and Wesleyan universities.

Frank Glazer, piano, has been with the Cantilena Piano Quartet since its inception. He has appeared with the leading orchestras of the United States and Europe and as guest artist with America's distinguished chamber music groups. Glazer is artist-in-residence and lecturer in music at Bates College in Lewiston, Maine.

Philipp Naegele, viola, formerly with the Vegh Quartet and the Cleveland Orchestra, has been associated with the Marlboro Music Festival since its inception. He tours Europe extensively.

Paul Olefsky, cello, was a founding member of the Cantilena Piano Quartet and rejoined the ensemble last year. He was the youngest first cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra and has appeared as soloist on five continents. Olefsky is professor of cello and chamber music at the University of Texas at Austin.

Brochures and applications for membership in the Chamber Music Society will be available at the concert. The 1987/88 season will present performances by the Boston Chamber Players, Sonus Lyricus, the Julliard Spring Quartet, the Vienna Chamber Trio, the Stanford String Quartet and the Muir String Quartet with pianist Jean-Phillippe Collard.

Single tickets are $10 ($5 for studnets under 21) at the door prior to the concert. For information, call 625-2212.

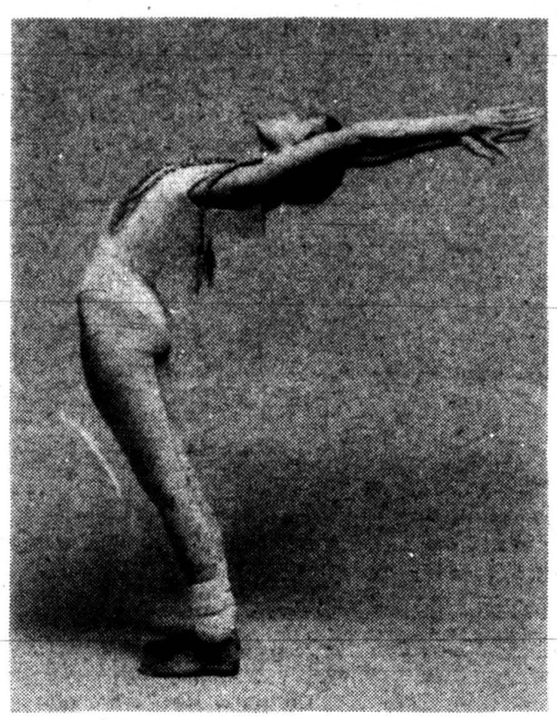
Santa Cruz-based yoga instructor to lead Sunset Center workshop

WHERE DOES a yoga teacher go to study yoga? Three Carmel-Monterey area teachers have found the answer by driving to Santa Cruz to work with Kali Rae at the Kali Rae Yoga Academy there. Now Diane Balesteri, Phyllis Haffner and Jim Weaver are making plans to welcome Kali Rae and staff to Carmel for a workshop presenting Kali Rae's Tri-Yoga System.



KALI RAE demonstrates position two of the Salutation to the Sun. The Santa Cruz-based instructor will lead a yoga workshop in Carmel.

The workshop will meet from 2 to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, April 11, in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center, Carmel. All yoga students, from beginners to advanced, are welcome. The cost is $10.

As its name implies, the Tri-Yoga System has three parts. First, the classic asanas or postures of Hatha Yoga are taught, with emphasis on correct body alignment and coordinated breathing techniques. Combining series of asanas into sustained flowing movements, to get energy moving freely throughout the body, is the second step. Finally, the flowing series are done at an aerobic pace to music in the third part, called Yogaerobics.

"Most of us were taught just the first part, but without the help with alignment that Kali gives, in yoga classes a decade ago," Balesteri explained. "The Salutation to the Sun was the only flowing series of postures," added Haffner. "Now Kali has developed many series, which combine balanced sets of stretches for all parts of the body, and have the energy-moving benefits always recognized in the Sun Salutation."

A special treat in Kali's classes is the music, composed specifically for the three parts of Tri-Yoga by Mercury Max, who is Kali's husband.

Diane Balesteri is currently teaching yoga classes at 5:15 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays at the Monterey Youth Center and at 9 a.m. on Mondays at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club in Pebble Beach. Phyllis Haffner and Jim Weaver teach yoga classes at 6:30 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays at Sunset Center in Carmel. All report that they are increasingly incorporating Kali Rae's Tri-Yoga techniques in their teaching.

P.G. Art Center assembles eclectic images

THE NEW exhibits at the Pacific Grove Art Center will feature "The Sign Show," a collection of contemporary sign art; "Ambient Art," hand-cast paper pictures and acrylic paintings by Philip Hurtig; images by Monterey Peninsula Photographic Workshop instructors and watercolors by Vanessa Stafford.

All exhibits will open with an artists' reception from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, April 10 at the art center, located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. in Pacific Grove. The shows will continue through May 16.

"The Sign Show," organized by members of the Central Coast Sign Association, was conceived as fine art seen through a variety of signage media and techniques. The collection will showcase how the professional signage artist creates personal statements within a traditional framewrok. Visitors will see the results, for example, of how each of the 25 exhibiting artists treated one letter of the alphabet on a two-foot square surface.

The Monterey Peninsula Photographic Workshops will sponsor a show and booklet signing in honor of its fourth birthday. The booklet is titled Seven Photographic Walks on the Monterey Peninsula by Seven Monterey Photographers.

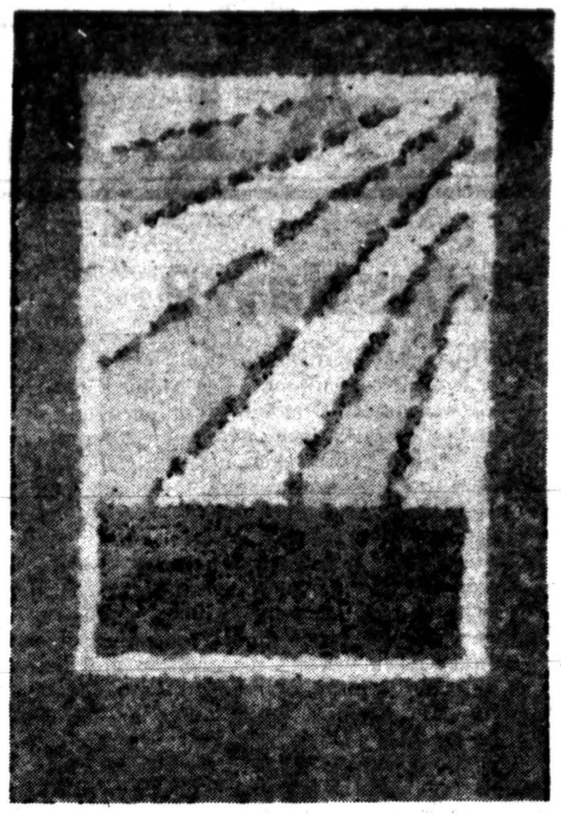
Vanessa Stafford is a visualist-painter who lives in Capitola. She has been painting for more than 16 years. Recently she painted different Santa Cruz landscapes — houses, ships and foliage. Her work has been exhibited around California, from San Franicsco to Santa Barbara. One of her paintings was named Best of Show at the 1985 Sonoma Art Festival.

Philip W. Hurtig's paintings and pressed paper pieces are heavily influenced by theater, music and Eastern and Native American philosophies. Hurtig earned his bachelor's degree from San Jose State University. He has studied with such artists as Fletcher Benton and Ken Auvill.

Hurtig furthered his education in New York and Europe where he studied the formulas and techniques of the old masters, particularly of the Dutch baroque. It was during this period of technical training that he began studying the psychology of art. He terms his artistic style, "Ambient Art."

Admission is free to the Pacific Grove Art Center, which is open noon to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. The art center is supported in part by a grant from the Monterey County Cultural Council.

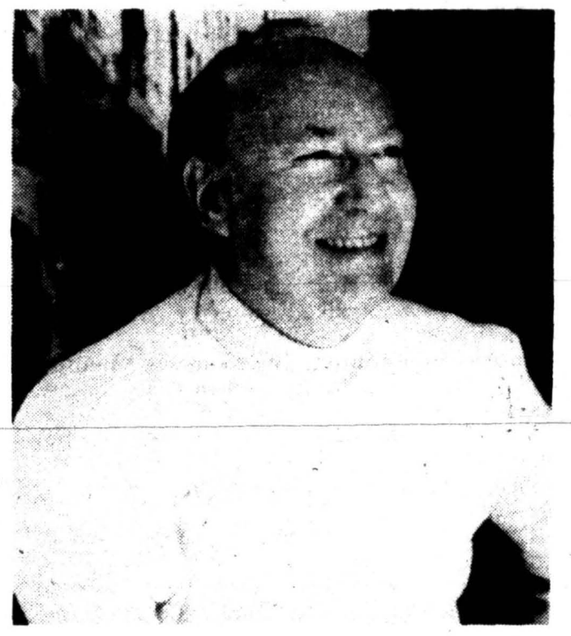
For additional information, call 375-2208.



PRESSED PAPER designs and paintings by Philip W. Hurtig will be featured in new exhibits opening Friday, April 10 at the Pacific Grove Art Center. Admission is free to the center, located at 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove.

Gallery Americana exhibition pays tribute to Jack Laycox

A COLLECTION OF paintings by Jack Laycox will be showcased at Gallery Americana in tribute to the late artist. An opening reception is planned 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday, April 11. The gallery is on Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street, Carmel.



LONGTIME Carmel resident and award-winning artist Jack Laycox will be honored during a memorial exhibit of his paintings.

A Carmel resident for many years, Laycox used the community as an artistic base to which he would always return. A world traveler, Laycox depicted scenes from his journeys to such places as Salzburg, Cuzco, Paris, Leningrad, Hong Kong and Australia.

According to Laycox, "Foremost an artist should enjoy the subject he paints. I have travelled extensively to see and sketch these places, and literally breathe the air, feel the subject I paint ... I feel I must have been there to properly present my interpretation and emotions. The true effort of a pinter should be, in the best terms possible, to interpret a given subject with the full emotion that he feels about the subject."

The impressionistic style of the artist's acrylics were to win him wide recognition. Laycox was listed in Who's Who in American Art, The International Encyclopedia of Artists and Personalities of the West and Midwest. His work is included in the collections of the M.H. De Young Museum, Royal Watercolor Society of London, Royce Galleries in Los Angeles and the Ichibanken Galleries, Tokyo. He is also noted for his commissions executed for Delta Airlines and the General Tire International Corporation.

For additional information about this exhibit, call 624-5071.

Caution advised when selecting Easter gifts

The Monterey County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals cautions against giving baby chicks, ducklings or rabbits for Easter gifts.

Parents who purchase these traditional Easter pets for their children often wind up with a dead animal and a tearful child. Some children, too young to know any better, literally squeeze the life out of these fragile animals. Others lose interest in caring for them and they are quickly forgotten.

If the baby animals do survive the first few weeks in a new environment, few families are prepared for the responsibility of caring for these pets through adulthood. Most homes are not equipped to handle the special needs of an adult chicken or rabbit.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta also cautions that baby chicks, ducklings and rabbits may carry infectious salmonella which may result in severe intestinal infections.

In the end, many of these animals are abandoned in local woods or ponds, where they are unable to fend for themselves. Others end up at the SPCA where they may be euthanized if a suitable home cannot be found.

If you're planning to give a gift to celebrate the arrival of spring, a stuffed toy version is your best buy. Toy stores, children's shops and card shops carry a wide variety of lasting gifts.

County cultural council seeks full-time director

John Rivers, president of the Monterey County Cultural Council, a county-wide arts service organization, has announced that the board of directors has begun an active search for a full-time executive director.

The director will be expected to provide broad leadership and direction to the council, which consists of residents from throughout Monterey County who serve as volunteers to coordinate county-wide cultural activities, including the regranting of funds received annually from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

According to Jim Bennett, a council board member and chairman of the search committee, "The person we need should have three years of broad, progressively responsible administrative/management level experience preferably in arts administration, especially in the areas of planning, grantwriting, program development/implementation and evaluation. He or she must have a demonstrated ability to raise funds."

"The executive director will be expected to guide the board in implementing current and new programs and will be required to focus a maximum amount of time on potential sources of funding," according to Rivers. "With limited dollars available to the arts, it becomes even more critical for a service organization to receive some of those funds so that it can continue to function in its cohesive role of pulling all of the arts disciplines together. It will be the task of our executive director to prepare our case statement and justify the need for funding," Rivers concluded.

Interested persons may send a resume to Jim Bennett, 1240 Del Monte Blvd., Pacific Grove, CA 93950. Resumes should be postmarked no later than May 1. Applicants are asked not to telephone.

Lecture to focus on Chinese jade

In China, jade is known as the stone of heaven where it has long been revered and collected. The Thursday, April 16 lecture sponsored by the Art Asia Museum will focus on "Traditional Chinese Jade." It covers a period of 2,000 years, from the Han period (206 B.C. — A.D. 220) through the early Ch'ing.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. in the community room of the Crossroads, Rio Road, off Highway 1, Carmel. The lecture is free.

Cultural arts fund applications collected

In January the Monterey City Council approved the formation of a Cultural Arts Fund to encourage and assist the cultural arts within the City of Monterey. The term "cultural arts" includes both the visual arts and the performing arts.

The fund is administered by the Colton Hall Museum and Cultural Arts Commission, which makes recommendations for dispersal to the city council. Some $10,000 is available for distribution at this time. The money may either be given in a block or may be divided between several different organizations.

The commission will consider applications for funds from:

1. Individuals or groups who propose a one-time cultural arts project within the community which will encourage artistic awareness, public participation and/or cultural art appreciation. (The project may be a sculpture, mural, painting or another acceptable medium.)
2. Organizations which propose a cultural arts event within the community, which will encourage artistic awareness, public participation and/or cultural art appreciation. (The event may be a performing arts program, a festival or a similar function.)

Applications for the Cultural Arts Fund are available at the Colton Hall Museum, City Hall, Monterey, CA 93940 — 375-9944. The deadline for the application is 5 p.m. Friday, May 1. No late applications will be considered.

Kim Weston cultivates unique photographic legacy exposed. He rolls off the names of painters whom he said have influenced him more than any lensman. Among the artists Weston appreciates are Bosch, Bernard and Wesselman.

"You could probably name five photographers and I probably wouldn't know them," Weston said. "I do know this guy, his name starts with an A. What is it — Ansel?"

Like his grandfather, Kim Weston makes use of the female form in his surrealistic settings. Nude women are juxtaposed with painted cities and countryside.

"I'm beginning a still-life series," Weston maintained. "I was trying to get away from models or at least have something to shoot when the models don't show up. The models are my friends. Thank god, I've never had to pay them."

Weston begins his photographic series with sketches.

"I do a lot of work in series. I sketch my ideas out first on paper. I draw where the model goes, the background. Then I go into the painting of the set. I have at least an idea of the theme, but what it means is deep, dark stuff."

While the new show at Carmel's Weston Gallery is his first one-man exhibit, Kim Weston has already participated in three-generation shows.

"I love my grandfather's work, but I'm two generations removed from him," he added. "I have the luxury to be so tied to his greatness. I get the luxury of seeing his work, being able to love and respect it. I get ideas and feelings from it."

But Weston is also committed to artistic growth.

"It's been an evolution from the beginning. My work has changed a lot. When photographs get to the print stage, I'm through with them. They're growth, a step in a direction. Hopefully the right direction. When the work stops being a surprise you might as well stop."

Kim Weston's first one-man show can be viewed through May 1 at the Weston Gallery in Carmel.

You don't have to be an American to die of a heart attack.

You also don't have to overeat. Or consume excessive amounts of cholesterol. Or ignore high blood pressure. Or smoke. But that's what a large segment of this country's population does. And that's one reason the United States has the highest incidence of heart attack in the world. At the American Heart Association, we're trying to help Americans change the way they live. And die.

Films focus on Japanese architecture

Two films highlighting Japanese architecture will be presented Tuesday, April 14 by the Oriental Art Society of the Monterey Peninsula. The first film, The Architecture of Japan, explores the contrasts between traditional Horyuji and Todaiji temples in Nara and Katsura Villa in Kyoto with contemporary structures of steel, glass and concrete in Tokyo.

Architect Kisho Kurokawa is the subject of the second film. In it Kurokawa puts forth his views of the architect's role in the urban setting, wherein he attempts to maintain a continuity between the old and new by incorporating traditional Japanese architectural expression into his modern designs.

Both films come to the Oriental Art Society through the auspices of the Japan Information Service of the Japanese Consulate General's office in San Francisco. They will be screened 8 p.m. in the community room of the Crossroads, Rio Road off Highway 1, Carmel.

Art and society examined

The Monterey Peninsula Foundation of Art will present Fred Martin, dean of the San Francisco Art Institute for more than 30 years. In a Saturday, April 11 program, Martin will discuss the artist's relationship to the spiritual decay of society.

The lecture will be presented 2 to 4 p.m. in the Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. Suggested donation is $5.

'Solid Gold Cadillac' screened

The Thursday, April 16 installment of Brown Bag Cinema will feature the 1956 comedy, The Solid Gold Cadillac. Judy Holliday portrays a minor stockholder in a giant corporation who wages a one-woman war against the board members whom she discovers are a gang of crooks. Paul Douglas and Fred Clark co-star.

Bring a brown bag lunch and join the group on the terrace outside the Chapman Room of Sunset Center, Carmel. Sunset Center provides the coffee, starting at noon. If weather is inclement the group meets in the Chapman Room.

At 1 p.m. the film is screened in Sunset Theater. Admission is free.

Japanese resource strategy studied

The World Affairs Council of the Monterey Bay Area will present as its speaker David T. Yamada. Yamada is professor of political science at Monterey Peninsula College and adjunct professor in the Department of International Police at the Monterey Institute for International Studies.

Yamada will speak on "Japan's Resource Strategy for the 21st Century." The program will begin at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, April 11 at Morse Auditorium, Monterey Institute of International Studies, 425 Van Buren St., Monterey. For additional information, call 625-0829.

Zen leaders meet in Valley

Dan Millman, author of The Peaceful Warrior, and Zen master Don Gilbert will meet on Sunday, April 12.

The event will take place 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. at the Sambosa Buddhist Study Center in Carmel Valley. Talks, stories, games and exercises are on the agenda. The meeting will be followed by a potluck.

The center is located on Robinson Canyon Road in Carmel Valley. Tickets are $10. For information, call 647-2201.

Few parts of our country have been more lovingly described than John Steinbeck's "pastures of heaven." Lush, lovely meadows teeming with fertility. Upswept hillsides dotted with clusters of oak, mantled with seas of undulating grass. High, broad ridges from which vast vistas of mountains, valleys and even the blue Pacific luxuriously display their quiet beauty.

In the midst of this favored area lies this gentleman's ranch, a superb mix of high and low lands. Owned by one family for several generations, its fertile valleys contain the original "Corral de Tierra" from which the area draws its name. Remember the box canyon of the old westerns? A corral de tierra is just that, a natural corral of earth and stone in which the ancient Spaniards of the area rounded up their cattle and horses. In those days these ranges were the luxuriant province of sleek, fat cattle and free running horses.

In latter years exclusive homes and elegant equestrian facilities have begun to dot the area adjacent to this property. And why not? Corral de Tierra Road, a paved country highway, winds through the valleys and has brought the world to this doorstep. Monterey Airport is only 15 minutes away, Pebble Beach just twenty, the charming village of Carmel just a bit farther. It's no longer remote, yet as beautiful as ever.

The ranch begins with some 60 acres of rich bottomland, rising gently to rounded foothills. One oak, at the border, has grown completely around a museum-worthy barbed-wire fence. To the south, the hills rise past patches of oak trees to a ridge nearly 1400 feet high, bordered on the east by another county road. Magnificent homesites stand out in the imagination on the various spurs of the ridge, and there could be future subdivision potential. No improvements; only the remains of a long-abandoned schoolhouse, a memory of a corncrib, and a now deserted ranch housesite.

The potential of this property for all equestrian uses is limitless. The level ground is more than ample for several polo fields, riding rings, barns, and pastures. Some of the more prominent rises would give the owner a vantage point from which to oversee his entire operation.

Two parcels 40 and 80 acres respectively, are offered for sale now, however, the owners will consider a sale of their entire 280x acres. Please call for further information and a private showing of this unique equestrian opportunity. 40 acres, $380,000. 80 acres, $580,000.

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 10

Another good way to decide where you want to retire is to study the obituary pages of a town's local newspaper. For example, a four week appraisal of The Carmel Pine Cone shows that 8 people died at 78, 3 at 82, 2 at 87. 2 at 89 and 9 over 90. A very respectable showing and one worthy of thoughtful consideration. Another salient fact is that there is a small tract in Carmel zoned as a cemetery. It's at the corner of 8th and Dolores and is now occupied by the Red Cross and American Legion buildings. Not one body is buried there! In almost 100 years of its history, Carmel has never found reason to activate its cemetery. Of course there are a couple of sarcophagii at the Mission, though it has never been established that Father Serra is entombed there. And there are a number of memorial windows, plaques, benches and bird baths scattered about the town. All in all, one may conclude that death is a stranger in Carmel, and this is a great place to retire.
